Electronic Collaborators Curtis Jay Bonk, Kira S. King, 2012-12-06 Two developments in recent years have converged to dramatically alter most conceptions of the teaching and learning process First technology has become increasingly interactive and distributed such that individual learners have available the means to participate in incredibly complex networks of information resources and instruction As these technological advancements facilitate interaction across classroom university and worldwide learning communities in both real time and delayed formats various instructional design and implementation problems spring forth Second the conventional teacher centered model wherein knowledge is transmitted from the teacher to the learner is being replaced by social constructivist and learner centered models of instruction These new learner centered models place emphasis on guiding and supporting students as they meaningfully construct their understanding of various cultures and communities As a consequence of these developments teachers need guidelines from educational researchers about integrating collaboration and communication tools into their classrooms This volume presents research on such collaborative technology as it facilitates augments and redefines academic learning environments The studies illustrate how schools teachers and students are discovering employing and modifying the numerous new computer conferencing and collaborating writing tasks and tools and their effects on social interaction and resulting student learning Documentation is given that will help teachers to make decisions that productively transform learning environments Three key objectives underlie this volume to discover some of the electronic collaboration tools and formats currently employed by teachers in schools and universities and to situate these within a five level taxonomy of computer conferencing and collaborative writing tools and approaches to examine some of the sociocultural learning variables embedded in the use of electronic collaborative tools and approaches and to participate in a dialogue about the importance of student electronic social interaction and dialogue from a sociocultural perspective This is a must read volume for all researchers scholars graduate students and practitioners interested in such fields as sociocultural theory process writing cooperative learning learner centeredness distance education peer conferencing and tutoring mentoring electronic collaboration problem and project based learning collaborative writing and educational reform

Self-study and Inquiry into Practice Linda R. Kroll, 2012-03-07 There are new pressures and familiar pressures on teacher educators to prepare teachers who will be able to teach successfully in a changing world and who will be able to change the world The question of how to prepare well qualified teachers has become an international question with global responses and consequences This book describes a stance Are the Students Learning? Evans Igho Akpo, 2021-08-02 The teacher lecturer or professor has always been the most critical part of any education system The question is not whether they are teaching because most of them are doing a great job teaching However the question that follows based on the statistics of students who graduate is whether the students are learning This book focuses on how teachers and educators can help students unleash their genius while understanding some barriers to student learning The book further explain how by providing key suggestions that support student learning English for Academic Purposes (EAP) in Asia Indika Liyanage, Tony Walker, 2014-09-11 The adoption of English as the language of study and scholarship is becoming increasingly common among universities across Asia But does this adoption of the English language not also mean the adoption of Western approaches to scholarship and knowledge This most timely and important book critically examines how EAP practitioners can negotiate between Western and Asian academic practices and approaches to knowledge and scholarship and is essential reading for anyone involved in international education Andy Kirkpatrick Professor in Linguistics Griffith University Native American Pedagogy and Cognitive-Based Mathematics Instruction Judith T. Hanks, 2019-05-20 Native American Pedagogy details a study that investigated the teaching of mathematics to Oneida Indian kindergartners This study proves that Native American children who are taught with culturally sensitive methods will perform more successfully on mathematical problem solving tasks and that Cognitively Guided Instruction an approach that provides teachers with research based knowledge of how children learn mathematics enables such culturally sensitive teaching methods An Invitation to Social Construction Kenneth J Gergen, 2015-04-25 This new edition of Kenneth J Gergen s celebrated text An Invitation to Social Construction is now even more accessible for students offering a clear and thorough introduction to one of the most significant movements in contemporary social science The Third Edition includes updates reflecting the many new developments in theory research and practice a more student friendly personal writing style three new chapters on education and therapy and health care and organizations key insights into how social construction can help support you in your research projects from start to finish An Invitation to Social Construction is the must read text for all social science
