Environmental Decision Making in Rural Locales Joan Goldstein, 1981-09-01 Environmental Decision Making in Rural Locales Joan Goldstein, 1981 Pine Barrens Richard T. T. Forman, 1998

Pine Barrens Ecosystem and Landscape focuses on the relationship between the ecological and landscape aspects of Pine Barrens of New Jersey. The idea in this book is based from the discussions of Rutgers University botanists and ecologists at the 1975 American Institute of Biological Science meetings and from the interest generated by the 1976 annual New Jersey Academy of Science meeting which focuses on the Pine Barrens. This seven part book starts with a short discussion on location and boundaries of the New Jersey Pine Barrens. Part I covers human activities from Indian activities and initial European perceptions of the land including settlement, lumbering, fuel wood and charcoal iron and glassworks, farming and livestock and real estate development. The next part of the book describes sandy deposits, geographic distribution of geologic formations and soil types with their ecologically important characteristics. Topics on hydrology, aquatic ecosystems and climatic and microclimatic conditions are presented in the third part of this reference. Part IV traces the history of vegetation starting before the Ice Age and analyzes vegetation using different approaches such as community types, community classification according to a European method and gradient analysis. Plants of the Pine Barrens are briefly described and listed in Part V. The final part illustrates community relationships of mammals, birds, reptiles, amphibians, fish, arthropods and soil microcommunities. The book is ideal for ecologists, botanists, geologists, soil scientists, zoologists, hydrologists, limnologists, engineers and scientists as well as planners, decision makers and managers who may largely determine the future of a region.

Contested Lands Robert J. Mason, 1992. The nation's first and only national reserve, the Pinelands of New Jersey, is located in the middle of the densely populated urban corridor between New York City and Philadelphia. Possessing vast quantities of pure groundwater, distinct flora and fauna, and a fascinating history of human occupancy and resource exploitation, the Pine Barrens is managed by a 15 member commission appointed at the federal, state and local level. In his discussion of the implementation of the Pinelands Commission's regional plan, Robert Mason explores the changing politics of place and the associated conflicts of interest that have emerged. The Pinelands program is widely viewed as a land use and regional planning experiment of national significance. While the commission is sustained by legislative and gubernatorial support and an absence of well organized public opposition, it still has had to accommodate community and rural entrepreneurial interests. In order to convey some sense of the social, political and economic texture of the Pinelands, Mason examines three communities: Woodland Township, Hamilton Township and Manchester Township. The Pinelands experience offers a unique model for the management of valued places across the nation and provides valuable lessons about the human problems that confront ecologically driven planning schemes with human settlement patterns, political subdivisions and economic systems. Author note: Robert J. Mason is Assistant Professor of Geography and Urban Studies at Temple University.
