Topic: Environment | Words: 864 Pages: 3

Introduction

In the context of the advancement of the green economy and energy industries inclining toward alternative energy sources, the disruption in the operations of conventional oil and gas companies triggers negative public and governmental reactions. Indeed, the scope of environmental damage caused by oil spills, for example, is global and impacts the ecosystem and wildlife of the whole planet. The notorious BP oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico that happened in 2010 was an incident that demonstrated how a large company was shifting the blame on contractors to avoid responsibility, monetary, and reputational losses. From this perspective, the opposition between environmental benefits and economic gains of large corporations triggers a more generalizable discussion that necessitates a critical analysis of the response of BP to the oil spill.

In 2010, had its drilling rig Deepwater Horizon operating in the waters of the Gulf of Mexico. In April, it exploded and sank, causing ten deaths and a large spill of oil from its tank into the ocean, which caused many problems to the wildlife and the communities living near. Many industries, including tourism, real estate, agriculture, and others, encountered significant monetary losses due to the pollution caused by the spill.
