What Adults Can Provide

Creating and Thinking Critically

Thinking

• In planning activities, ask yourself: "Is this an opportunity for children to find their own ways to represent and develop their own ideas?" Avoid children just reproducing someone else's ideas.

• Build in opportunities for children to play with materials before using them in planned tasks.

• Play is a key opportunity for children to think creatively and flexibly, solve problems and link ideas. Establish the enabling conditions for rich play: space, time, flexible resources, choice, control, warm and supportive relationships.

• Recognisable and predictable routines help children to predict and make connections in their experiences.

• Routines can be flexible, while still basically orderly.

• Plan linked experiences that follow the ideas children are really thinking about.

• Use mind maps to represent thinking together.

• Develop a learning community which focuses on how and not just what we are learning.

Active Learning

Motivation

• Children will become more deeply involved when you provide something that is new and practical to them in reality, especially when it connects to their interests.

• Motivate and engage children by relating, looking for signs of deep involvement to identify opportunities for meaningful experiences.

• Develop shared goals that are realistic and achievable through shared interests.

• Establish and maintain focus so that they develop their own projects or that they feel involved in something using the principles of their personal activities.

• Plan meaningful activities and extend if possible ideas that arise.

• Make sure you time for children to continue.

Playing and Learning

Engagement

• Develop meaningful experiences which are accessible and appropriate to the needs and interests of children in a range of ways.

• Make sure resources are accessible and flexible to use.

• Arrange flexible indoor and outdoor space and resources where children can explore, build, move and take play.

• Play centres constructed to bring focus and meaning to play through self-chosen play.

• Plan for flexible resources and challenge opportunities to be responsive to the children.

• Develop shared goals around opportunities to play and learn.
