Person-Environment

Psychology W. Bruce Walsh, Kenneth H. Craik, Richard H. Price, 2000-05 A variety of theoretical approaches to person environment psychology has been developed over the years representing a rich range of intellectual perspectives This second edition links the past and present and looks toward the future in reviewing new directions and perspectives in person environment psychology Stated differently the main thrust of this volume is to present contemporary models and perspectives that make some sensible predictions concerning the individual and the environment using the person environment relationship Within a person environment framework these models and perspectives are concerned with how people tend to influence environments and how environments reciprocally tend to influence people Thus this second edition presents new directions in person environment psychology and the implications for theory research and application

Environmental Psychology Dinesh Nagar, 2006 Directions in Person-Environment Research and Practice (Routledge Revivals) Jack Nasar, Wolfgang F. E. Preiser, 2016-06-10 First published in 1999 this book presents a fresh and diverse set of perspectives representing key directions of research and practice in the field of environmental design research Leading researchers in various areas of person environment research such as privacy children s environment post occupancy evaluation environmental cognition environmental aesthetics crime prevention housing and environmental protection and environmental design present what they consider their best work The book argues for the value of a multi disciplinary and interdisciplinary approach to problem solving and outlines many important directions for methods research and practice

Environmental Stress Gary W. Evans, 1984-05-25 A systematic 1982 on human reactions to five environmental stress factors Environment and Behavior C. Holahan, 2012-12-06 This book has been written as a text for advanced undergraduate students and graduate students in the burgeoning field of study that has come to be called environment and behavior It is appropriate for courses in environmental psychology social ecology ecological psychology and community psychology when the community is conceptualized from an ecological viewpoint In addition the book may be used in design courses oriented toward an appreciation of the interaction between architecture and human behavior The book presents a thorough explication of a perspective or viewpoint in approaching the study of environment and behavior which has tended to be underemphasized in past work in this area The dynamic perspective focuses on the active role people play in dealing with environmental challenges Its investigative interest is in the processes that mediate the effects of environment on behavior especially the positive and adaptive ways in which people cope with the environment The accent is on the creative complex yet subtle character of these environmental processes

Perspectives on Environment and Behavior Daniel Stokols, 2013-11-11 The inception of this volume can be traced to a series of Environmental Psychology Colloquia presented at the University of California Irvine during the spring of 1974 These colloquia were held in conjunction with Social Ecology 252 a graduate seminar on Man and the Environment Although the eight colloquia covered a wide range of topics and exemplified a diversity of research techniques they seemed to converge on some common theoretical and methodological assumptions about the nature of environment behavioral research The apparent continuities among these colloquia suggested the utility of developing a manuscript that would provide a historical overview of research on environment and behavior a representation of its major concerns and an analysis of its conceptual and empirical trends Thus expanded versions of the initial presentations were integrated with a supplemental set of invited manuscripts to yield the present volume of original contributions by leading researchers in the areas of ecological and environmental psychology

Environmental Design Research Wolfgang Preiser, 2018-12-07 First published in 1973 this two volume set summarises and structures the contributions by researchers at the Fourth International EDRA Conference held in April 1973 The second volume focuses on the symposia and invited papers which were theory orientated The symposia comprehensively assessed the status of contemporary knowledge as well as potential future directions in the respective fields contributing to environmental design research This volume also provides summaries of the workshops which explored problem solving processes and offered methodological applications to environmental analysis and other topics of concern This book will be of interest to students of architecture and design

The Lewin Legacy Eugene Stivers, Susan Wheelan, 2012-12-06 I have attended quite a few conferences and meetings devoted to the ideas of Kurt Lewin Among these the 1984 conference at Temple was outstanding for its high quality What made it so successful Several things The conference included a stimulating mix of generations The first generation of women who obtained their Ph D s in psychology in Berlin in the 1920 s strike me as a remarkable group Now in their 80 s they are characterized by enormous vigor and energy They are still professionally active Two of them Tamara Dembo and Maria Rickers Ovsienkina joined us Other participants in the Temple conference had been in Iowa in the 1930 s and 1940 s or at MIT Of course there were many who had learned about Lewin from their own teachers and in some cases their teachers teachers There was a good mixture of applied psychologists and academics Father said on several occasions that he did not want to found a school of psychology as such Rather he wanted to introduce the field theoretical viewpoint and approach I think he would have been stimulated by and enthusiastic about the many diverse areas to which Lewinian analyses ideas and concepts are applied today as illustrated by this volume. He would have been pleased to see so many people applying basic theoretical concepts to important social problems. Father loved to discover new things about America.

Psychological Perspectives in Environmental and Developmental Issues Adesh Agarwal, Ashok Kumar Saxena, 2003. Papers in this volume address issues relevant to environment and human development and focus on the theory of psychological differentiation in the context of environmental cognition. Give attention to rural and urban settings useful for psychologists, educationalists and ecologists. Particularly Designing for Therapeutic Environments David Canter, Sandra Canter, 2025-09-01. Originally published in 1979, Therapeutic Environments brings together a set of previously unpublished accounts of studies by internationally recognized experts in North America and Britain of the full range of places which are designed to facilitate the processes of healing, caring and helping. The papers have been collected and edited by David Canter, an Environmental Psychologist who has published a number of books on people and buildings, and Sandra Canter, a Clinical Psychologist who has published previously on the determinants of personality and the effect of vitamins. During the previous two decades there had been a growing outcry in both Europe and North America against the environments in which society housed those undergoing treatment or requiring care and attention. Clearly institutions should not make their inmates worse and the consensus of opinion at the time was that if they were not actually making people worse, the caring buildings certainly were not helping to make them better. In response to this awakened desire to produce physical environments which contributed positively to the therapeutic process, this book drew together specially commissioned papers written by those who had been actively involved in studying or creating therapeutic environments both in Britain and America. Forming a unique overview of the present state of thought and action in this increasingly important area of design, Therapeutic Environments was an important work of reference not only for clinical community and environmental psychologists but for all social work groups and aware architects with an active interest in the planning and operation of environments with a specialist caring responsibility. This book is a re-issue originally published in 1979. The language used is a reflection of its era and no offence is meant by the Publishers to any reader by this re-publication.

The Construction of Cognitive Maps Juval Portugali, 2007-08-23. Processes which are exclusive to humans in their encoding, storing, decoding and retrieving spatial knowledge for various tasks. The authors present and discuss connectionist models of cognitive maps which are based on local representation versus models which are based on distributed representation as well as connectionist models concerning language and spatial relations. As is well known, Gibson's 1979 ecological approach suggests a view on cognition which is diametrically different from the classical mainstream view of perception and thus cognition is direct, immediate and needs no internal information processing and is thus essentially an external process of interaction between an organism and its external environment. The chapter by Harry Heft introduces J.J. Gibson's ecological approach and its implication to the construction of cognitive maps in general and to the issue of wayfinding in particular According to Heft main stream cognitive sciences are essentially Cartesian in nature and have not as yet internalized the implications of Darwin s theory of evolution Gibson in his ecological approach has tried to do exactly this The author introduces the basic terminology of the ecological approach and relates its various notions in particular optic flow nested hierarchy and affordances to navigation and the way routes and places in the environment are learned
