Theology, Disability, and Spiritual Transformation Michael Hryniuk, 2010 In this study Michael Hryniuk develops a full phenomenological psychological and theological account of spiritual transformation in the context of L Arche a federation of Christian communities that welcome persons with learning disabilities The book begins with a critical examination of current perspectives on spiritual transformation in theology and Christian spirituality and constructs a new foundational formulation of transformation as a shift in consciousness identity and behavior Through extensive analysis of the narratives of the caregiver assistants who share life with those who are disabled this case study reveals an alternative vision of the three fold way that unfolds through a series of profound awakenings in relationships of mutual care and presence an awakening to the capacity to love to bear inner anguish and darkness and to experience radical human and divine acceptance The book examines the psychological dimensions of spiritual transformation through the lens of contemporary affect theory and explores how care givers experience a profound healing of shame in their felt sense of identity and self worth

Quality of Life for People with Disabilities Roy I. Brown, 1997 Interest in quality of life has increased considerably over recent years and is now making considerable impact amongst all practitioners concerned with people with disabilities This book looks critically at the concepts assessment and practice as they relate to quality of life issues in many fields of disability The issues for professional training and practice are evaluated and the benefits of involvement in creative activities are examined Vocational social and leisure implications for quality of life considerations are also explored in a number of chapters Case studies and examples are used throughout the book to make this edition accessible and of real practical use to all those working with people with disabilities Families in Distress Malcolm Bush, 2024-03-29 Families in Distress Public Private and Civic Responses explores the complex and often contentious interplay between public and private sectors in addressing the needs of children from troubled families The book critiques the conventional debate over the roles of governmental versus private welfare services arguing that this dialogue is too simplistic The author emphasizes the importance of considering individuals as citizens who have rights and responsibilities rather than just as clients in need of help By introducing the concept of civic responsibility the book suggests that helping troubled families should not only be a matter of matching needs to services but also about engaging citizens in a democratic process of addressing social issues This broadens the debate by proposing that civic participation in the form of community involvement and oversight is essential to improving the outcomes of welfare services and ensuring that citizens play a meaningful role in the welfare system The author further examines how various organizations both public and private have responded to the challenges faced by families particularly those suffering from poverty neglect and abuse While the expansion of welfare systems and professional services has provided more formalized help the book argues that these organizations often fail to address the deeper issues of family distress and may even inadvertently reinforce dependency The analysis includes a critical review of the impact of professional social work welfare policies and public services on families urging a shift towards a more citizen driven approach The book calls for a rethinking of how social welfare should operate advocating for policies that not only address immediate needs but also encourage independence and long term stability for families in distress Through this approach the book provides a thought provoking examination of the ways in which society can better balance the roles of public institutions private organizations and civic participation in responding to family crises This title is part of UC Press s Voices Revived program which commemorates University of California Press s mission to seek out and cultivate the brightest minds and give them voice reach and impact Drawing on a backlist dating to 1893 Voices Revived makes high quality peer reviewed scholarship accessible once again using print on demand technology This title was originally published in 1988

Religion as a Social Determinant of Public Health Ellen L. Idler, 2014 Frequently in partnership but sometimes at odds religious institutions and public health institutions work to improve the well being of their communities There is increasing awareness among public health professionals and the general public that the social conditions of poverty lack of education income inequality poor working conditions and experiences of discrimination play a dominant role in determining health status But this broad view of the social determinants of health has largely ignored the role of religious practices and institutions in shaping the life conditions of billions around the globe In Religion as a Social Determinant of Public Health leading scholars in the social sciences public health and religion address this omission by examining the embodied sacred practices of the world s religions the history of alignment and tension between religious and public health institutions the research on the health impact of religious practice throughout the life course and the role of religious institutions in health and development efforts around the globe In addition the volume explores religion s role in the ongoing epidemics of HIV AIDS and Alzheimer s disease as well as preparations for an influenza pandemic Together these groundbreaking essays help complete the picture of the social determinants of health by including religion which has until now been an invisible determinant Soteriologies of India and Their Role in the Perception of Disability Anand Rao, 2004. At the turn of the century and the beginning of the new Millennium India has made extraordinary industrial and economic progress. At the same time the sub-continent is faced with innumerable problems in the area of basic social services. Religion plays an important role in the interpersonal relationship and social interaction of the people. Religion is not only worship and prayer but dictates such factors as who could come in physical contact with the other and who has the right to draw water from a well and who is deprived of it. Because of these factors it is necessary to look at the perception of disability in the soteriologies of India. This study confines itself to Hinduism as the major religion of India that is based on the achievement of salvation and thus to escape the cycle of birth, death and rebirth, and Christianity on the other hand that is involved in trying to improve the conditions of the poor and the needy and its main precept is the love of neighbours. It would be interesting to pursue these distinctions in reviewing the perception of disability in both these religions.

Limits to Pain Nils Christie, 2007-10-01. Inflicting pain is a serious matter often at variance with cherished values such as kindness and forgiveness. Attempts might therefore be made to hide the basic character of the activity or to give various scientific reasons for inflicting pain. Such attempts are systematically described in this book and related to social conditions. None of these attempts to cope with pain seem to be quite satisfactory. It is as if societies in their struggle with penal theories oscillate between attempts to solve an insoluble dilemma. Punishment is used less in some systems than in others. On the basis of examples from systems where pain is rarely inflicted, some general conditions for a low level of pain infliction are formulated. The standpoint is that if pain is to be applied this should be done without a manipulative purpose and in a social form resembling that which is normal when people are in deep sorrow. Most of the material is from Scandinavia but the book draws extensively on the crime control debate in the United Kingdom and USA.
