MacFadden, 2013-04-17 The mystery of how migrating animals find their way over unfamiliar terrain has intrigued people for centuries and has been the focus of productive research in the biological sciences for several decades Whether or not the earth's magnetic field had anything to do with their navigational abilities has surfaced and been dismissed several times beginning at least in the mid to late 1800s This topic generally remained out of the mainstream of scientific research for two reasons 1 The apparent irreproducibility of many of the behavioral experiments which were supposed to demonstrate the existence of the magnetic sense and 2 Perceived theoretical difficulties which were encountered when biophysicists tried to understand how such a sensory system might operate However during the mid to late 1960s as the science of ethology animal behavior grew it became clear from studies on bees and birds that the geomagnetic field is used under a variety of conditions As more and more organisms were found to have similar abilities the problem shifted back to the question as to the basis of this perception Of the various schemes for transducing the geomagnetic field to the nervous system which have been proposed the hypothesis of magnetite based magnetoreception discussed at length in this volume has perhaps the best potential for explaining a wide range of these effects even though this link is as yet clear only in the case of magnetotactic bacteria Horseless Age, 1916 Space Physics and Aeronomy, Magnetospheres in the Solar System Romain

Magnetotails in the Solar System Andreas Keiling, Caitríona Jackman, Peter Delamere, 2015-02-02 All magnetized planets in our solar system Mercury Earth Jupiter Saturn Uranus and Neptune interact strongly with the solar wind and possess well developed magnetotails It is not only the strongly magnetized planets that have magnetotails Mars and Venus have no global intrinsic magnetic field yet they possess induced magnetotails Comets have magnetotails that are formed by the draping of the interplanetary magnetic field In the case of planetary satellites moons the magnetotail refers to the wake region behind the satellite in the flow of either the solar wind or the magnetosphere of its parent planet The largest magnetotail of all in our solar system is the heliotail the magnetotail of the heliosphere The variety of solar wind conditions planetary rotation rates ionospheric conductivity and physical dimensions provide an outstanding opportunity to extend our understanding of the influence of these factors on magnetotail processes and structures Volume highlights include Discussion on why a magnetotail is a fundamental problem of magnetospheric physics Unique collection of tutorials on a large range of magnetotails in our solar system In depth reviews comparing magnetotail processes at Earth with other magnetotail structures found throughout the heliosphere Collectively Magnetotails in the Solar System brings together for the first time in one book a collection of tutorials and current developments addressing different types of magnetotails As a result this book should appeal to a broad community of space scientists and it should also be of interest to astronomers who are looking at tail like structures beyond our solar system
