Environment And Development In Sub Saharan Africa:

Reconciling Environmental Protection and Economic Development in Sub-Saharan Africa. The Case of Cameroon Ruddy Fualefeh Morfaw Azanu, 2019-03-26 Master's Thesis from the year 2018 in the subject Environmental Sciences grade A University of Buea course LLM International Law language English abstract This work has engaged in refining current understandings of the possibilities for attaining environmental conservation objectives amidst the incessant struggle for economic advancement in Sub Saharan Africa SSA It has examined the inability of the region to properly assimilate sustainable developmental tenets as reflected in the weaknesses of the several legislations that exist The analysis was done through the concept of the respect for the Rule of Law and considered all relevant factors in terms of structural and administrative changes as well as reflected needs of the region using Cameroon as a case study Through the doctrinal research approach it demonstrated in theory the correlation between environmental protection and economic development Looking at the legal policy and institutional frameworks for environmental protection within SSA and Cameroon it has examined the effect of the several legislations on business and trade and therefore the overall upshot on economic development The work has consequently scrutinized the possibility of reconciling environment and economic needs through green growth and a green economy Amidst these difficulties associated with the concept of sustainable development the question was therefore contemplated whether the pressing international calls for the restriction of the use of Africa's resources could be tantamount to a disguised neo colonialist move by former imperialist nations to retard the region's advancement The findings of the work therefore revealed outweighing difficulties associated with presently attaining green growth within the region and how its efforts continually stifle economic growth and development The weaknesses inherently associated with the concept of sustainable development which are strongly reflected in the prevailing African situation established some misgivings about the good faith propagated by the rich North towards the poor South The work therefore suggested that the region should properly weigh its needs and goals in the light of the environment and the economy and not rush into commitments it cannot live up to To achieve this it would have to integrate the opinions of all stakeholders into the decision making process from public to private and to individual levels

The Environment and Development in Africa

Moses K. Tesi, 2000-01-01 The premise of The Environment and Development in Africa is that current environmental problems in sub Saharan Africa are an outcome of the continent's development activities Whether these activities have generated economic growth and raised living standards or have led to growth without overall increases in living standards or have even contributed to a decline in people's well being developments in that region have produced effects that have degraded Africa's environment in many ways This book presents a comprehensive and systematic analysis of the context of the environmental issues facing sub Saharan African states Contributors discuss the problems associated with generating the capacity to manage Africa's environmental concerns assess the impact of economic development efforts on the region's environment and examine various societal and policy responses to environmental problems and to development problems linked to ecological decay This is an important book for scholars and policy advisors concerned with African studies and global environmental issues The Environment and Development Frontier in Sub-Saharan Africa Cornelius Mbifung Lambi,2010 Down to Earth National Research Council,Division on Earth and Life Studies,Board on Earth Sciences and Resources,Mapping Science Committee,Committee on Geography,Committee on the Geographic Foundation for Agenda 21,2002-10-24 In 1992 world leaders adopted Agenda 21 the work program of the 1992 U N Conference on Environment and Development This landmark event provided a political foundation and action items to facilitate the global transition toward sustainable development The international community marked the tenth anniversary of this conference in Johannesburg South Africa in August 2002 Down to Earth a component of the U S State Department s Geographic Information for Sustainable Development project for the World Summit focuses on sub Saharan Africa with examples drawn from case study regions where the U S Agency for International Development and other agencies have broad experience Although African countries are the geographic focus of the study the report has broader applicability Down to Earth summarizes the importance and applicability of geographic data for sustainable development and draws on experiences in African countries to examine how future sources and applications of geographic data could provide reliable support to decision makers as they work towards sustainable development The committee emphasizes the potential of new technologies such as satellite remote sensing systems and geographic information systems that have revolutionized data collection and analysis over the last decade Environment and Development Issues in Sub-Saharan Africa ,2001 Prospects for Sustainable Development in Sub-Saharan Africa United States. more in depth examination of several specific examples of sustainability in urban Africa Tourism and Development in Sub-Saharan Africa Marina Novelli, 2015-09-16 Over the past 20 years the perception of tourism as an effective contributor to socio economic development in the developing world has propagated with many viewing tourism as a provider for poverty alleviation and towards other UN Millennium Development Goals Over the same period readers have become familiar with the paradoxes complexities and inequalities of tourism in relation to development wealth creation growth redistribution governance and hosts guests relationships This volume further extends this critical debate with a much needed cohesive publication on Sub Sahara Africa SSA In an era of fluctuating tourist arrivals at global level the growth of tourism in SSA requires deeper consideration in terms of its inconsistent and questionable implications at local level Taking as a central theme the debate on whether tourism should be used in development efforts this book examines the way in which tourism has controversially become the way forward to development in several SSA locations and assesses bottlenecks to sustainable development as well as dilemmas and challenges faced by those SSA destinations seeking to achieve development through tourism It offers an explicit set of chapters adopting a multi disciplinary approach drawing upon tourism studies human geography sociology anthropology political economy development and environmental studies and integrates case studies authored by local African practitioners and academics to produce a book that gave voice to local experts on local realities Combining an overview of key theories concepts contemporary issues and debates as well as practical insights from a wide range of regions in SSA this book will be a valuable resource for those investigating the role of tourism in development

Assessing opportunities and constraints for biofuel development in sub-Saharan Africa Graham von Maltitz, William Stafford, 2011-08-24 Sustainable biofuel production should provide opportunities for sub Saharan African countries and their inhabitants especially in impoverished rural areas Biofuel feedstock production has the potential to bring job opportunities and earnings but this should not be at the cost of existing livelihoods and the local environment Biofuels also have the potential to increase energy security in these countries for both transportation and household needs Sub Saharan African biofuel feedstock production projects can be classified into 4 distinct models based on production scales small versus large scale farm plantations and on the intended use of the biofuel local versus national The first type embraces large corporate plantations to supply the market for liquid transport fuel blends The second type comprises small scale producers linked to the corporate producers The third type involves small scale producers supplying the local energy needs of farmers and villages The fourth and rarest type is linked to the large corporate plantations to meet the corporation s own energy needs The introduction of foreign owned large scale corporate plantations producing biofuel for transport fuel blends causes the most concern in sub Saharan Africa as their scale and ownership arrangements may disrupt rural livelihoods and affect access rights to land resources However these projects can also bring job opportunities thereby providing alternative sources of income for poor communities This working paper assesses mechanisms for limiting the negative impacts while maximising

A Critical Evaluation of Conservation and Development in Sub-Saharan Africa Paul Andre DeGeorges,Brian Kevin Reilly,2008 Revisiting Environmental and Natural Resource Questions in Sub-Saharan Africa Wilson Akpan,Philani Moyo,2017-06-23 Based on case studies in Southern Africa West Africa and East Africa this book revisits some of the dilemmas and paradoxes associated with the development management and utilisation of environmental resources as well as lacklustre official handling of climate change related challenges in Sub Saharan Africa On the subject of natural resource exploitation in particular the book revisits scholarly debates and specific practices around compensation benefit and burden sharing local participation and space place dynamics It highlights fundamental ambiguities in the ways the dominant discourses and policy responses have been framed and mobilised and examines epistemic and ideational incongruences that have hobbled and sometimes negated the effectiveness of otherwise well intentioned interventions On climate change the book revisits debates around the vulnerability assets nexus with regard to mitigation and adaptation as well as the intersection of climate information and livelihoods in agro based settings The contradictions gaps and limitations of climate change policies and strategies in different regions are re examined based on new data In the last few years the Environment and Natural Resources Working Group of the South African Sociological Association SASA has intensified efforts to go beyond the annual SASA Congresses and the production of journal articles in making the research agendas of its members more visible to the global scholarly and policy community This book is one result of such efforts It calls for a constant questioning of orthodoxies and the promotion of ethnographically sensitive and epistemologically nuanced scholarly and policy approaches to developmental challenges in Africa especially in relation to environmental resources and environmental change Africa and the Sustainable Development Goals Maano Ramutsindela,David Mickler,2019-06-13 The book draws upon the expertise and international research collaborations forged by the Worldwide Universities Network Global Africa Group to critically engage with the intersection in theory and practice of the Sustainable Development Goals SDGs and Africa s development agendas and needs Further it argues that and demonstrates how the SDGs should be understood as an aspirational blueprint for development with multiple meanings that are situated in dynamic and contested terrains As the SDGs have substantial implications for development policy and resourcing at both the macro and micro levels their relevance is not only context specific but should also be assessed in terms of the aspirations and needs of ordinary citizens across the continent Drawing on analyses and evidence from both the natural and social sciences the book demonstrates that progress towards the SDGs must meet demands for improving human well being under diverse andchallenging socio economic political and environmental conditions Examples include those from the mining industry public health employment and the media In closing it highlights how international collaboration in the form of research networks can enhance the production of
