particular to the 1989 adoption of the Basel Convention She pinpoints a key weakness of the regulations because hazard transfer is dynamic efforts to stop one form of toxic export prompt new forms to emerge For instance laws intended to ban the disposal of toxic wastes in the Third World led corporations to ship these byproducts to poor countries for recycling And Clapp warns current efforts to prohibit this recycling movement may accelerate a new business endeavor the relocation to poor countries of entire industries that generate toxic wastes Clapp concludes that the dynamic nature of hazard transfer results from increasingly fluid global trade and investment relations in the context of a highly unequal world and from the leading role played by multinational corporations and environmental NGOs Governments she maintains have for too long failed to capture the initiative and have instead only reacted to these opposing forces Making Ecopreneurs Michael Schaper, 2016-05-06 The first edition of this book looked at the emergence of ecopreneurs environmental entrepreneurs gaining competitive advantage for their firms through understanding and utilising green issues These green entrepreneurs have led the way in enabling market forces to generate economic growth whilst protecting the environment and encouraging sustainability This new edition continues the examination of what distinguishes these green entrepreneurs from others It draws on a diverse range of case studies embracing examples of both successful and unsuccessful ecopreneurial ventures on at least four continents Contributions have been updated and a number of entirely new chapters describe sustainable business projects in places ranging from the USA India western Europe UK Australia central America and New Zealand Making Ecopreneurs second edition charts recent developments and remains highly relevant to researchers in the fields of sustainable business development and entrepreneurship to policymakers within governments and NGOs and to those running businesses Benzene Emissions from Maleic Anhydride Industry: Environmental Impact Statement ,1980
