Sousa, 2013-08-30 An updated investigation of alternate pathways for American environmental policymaking made necessary by legislative gridlock The golden era of American environmental lawmaking in the 1960s and 1970s saw twenty two pieces of major environmental legislation including the Clean Air Act the Clean Water Act and the Endangered Species Act passed by bipartisan majorities in Congress and signed into law by presidents of both parties But since then partisanship the dramatic movement of Republicans to the right and political brinksmanship have led to legislative gridlock on environmental issues In this book Christopher Klyza and David Sousa argue that the longstanding legislative stalemate at the national level has forced environmental policymaking onto other pathways Klyza and Sousa identify and analyze five alternative policy paths which they illustrate with case studies from 1990 to the present appropriations politics in Congress executive authority the role of the courts next generation collaborative experiments and policymaking at the state and local levels This updated edition features a new chapter discussing environmental policy developments from 2006 to 2012 including intensifying partisanship on the environment the failure of Congress to pass climate legislation the ramifications of Massachusetts v EPA and other Obama administration executive actions some of which have reversed Bush administration executive actions Yet they argue despite legislative gridlock the legacy of 1960s and 1970s policies has created an enduring green state rooted in statutes bureaucratic routines and public expectations      Environmental Politics Norman Miller, 2017-12-19 At every stage environmental policy is the result of the combat of stakeholders interested in and affected by the problem being addressed and the range of possible solutions The combatants include any or all of the following the federal government environmental advocacy groups and business the media the scientific community think tanks NGOs of every stripe trade associations and professional organizations and even state and local governments each of whom have their own interests in the resulting policy Environmental Politics Interest Groups the Media and the Making of Policy discusses political battles over the environment from ground level as they are fought in legislative chambers the daily newspaper on television and increasingly on the Internet The text explores environmental politics as a clash of interests not ideologies and environmental policy as a result of the reconciliation of those interests The author covers not only the conventional aspects of the policymaking process but more recent and less recognized elements and developments such as Proliferation of legislative riders and monument designations as major environmental strategies Evolving role of the media from science popularizer to agenda setter Growing influence on both Congress and the public of conservative and libertarian foundations and think tanks Devolution of environmental power from the Federal to state governments Metamorphosis of EPA in a business driven regulatory revolution Effect of globalization on US environmental policy Newly emerging role of the precautionary principle in marrying science and politics Increasing role of the Internet in promoting populist issues and promoting the decentralization of the environmental power structure No other book covers the politics of the environment the way this one
