Environmental Transitions Petr Pavlínek, John Pickles, 2002-09-26 Environmental Transitions is a detailed and comprehensive account of the environmental changes in Central and Eastern Europe both under state socialism and during the period of transition to capitalism. The change in politics in the late 1980s and early 1990s allowed an opportunity for a rapid environmental clean up in an area once considered one of the most environmentally devastated regions on earth. The book illustrates how transformations after 1989 have brought major environmental improvements as well as new environmental problems. It shows how environmental policy, economic change and popular support for environmental movements have specific and changing geographies associated with them. Environmental Transitions addresses a large number of topics including the historical geographical analysis of the environmental change, health impacts of environmental degradation, the role of environmental issues during the anti communist revolutions, legislative reform and the effects of transition on environmental quality after 1989. Environmental Transitions contains detailed case studies from the region which illustrate the complexity of environmental issues and their intimate relationship with political and economic realities. It gives theoretically informed ideas for understanding environmental change in the context of the political economy of state socialism and post communist transformations drawing on a wide body of literature from West Central and Eastern Europe.

Politics and the Environment in Eastern Europe Eszter Krasznai Kovacs, 2021-07-28 Europe remains divided between east and west with differences caused and worsened by uneven economic and political development Amid these divisions the environment has become a key battleground The condition and sustainability of environmental resources are interlinked with systems of governance and power from local to EU levels Key challenges in the eastern European region today include increasingly authoritarian forms of government that threaten the operations and very existence of civil society groups the importation of locally contested conservation and environmental programmes that were designed elsewhere and a resurgence in cultural nationalism that prescribes and normalises exclusionary nation building myths This volume draws together essays by early career academic researchers from across eastern Europe Engaging with the critical tools of political ecology its contributors provide a hitherto overlooked perspective on the current fate and reception of environmentalism in the region It asks how emergent forms of environmentalism have been received how these movements and perspectives have redefined landscapes and what the subtler effects of new regulatory regimes on communities and environment dependent livelihoods have been Arranged in three sections with case studies from Czechia Hungary Lithuania Poland Romania and Serbia this collection develops anthropological views on the processes and consequences of the politicisation of the environment It is valuable reading for human geographers social and cultural historians political ecologists social movement and government scholars political scientists and specialists on Europe and European Union politics mainstream environmental thinking in all EU policy sectors Europe Bettina Van Hoven, Tim Unwin, 2016-04-15 First published in 2003 Europe lives in transition gives a voice to people living through transition opening a door for outsiders to understand how such people have lived an opportunity for one to speak and another to listen The book has been deliberately written in an accessible engaging and first hand manner Original quotes from various projects are woven together throughout the text This book focuses explicitly on the experiences of respondents and functions largely to introduce themes and speakers The principal themes are identities relationships production consumption and power Except for selected crucial theoretical and methodological discussions any academic commentary which might overshadow the words of the respondents is kept to a minimum A key aim is to engage the readers with the text by confronting them with their own preconceptions and geographical imaginations Each chapter opens with two activity sections to help readers think about the themes in broader terms for example by doing some research themselves Each chapter closes with two further activity sections for review and discussion Socioeconomic and Environmental Impacts on Agriculture in the New Europe Serban

Scrieciu, 2011-03-13 This book looks at agriculture and the environment placed within the dynamic context of post communist societal change and entry into the European Union EU Scrieciu explores developments in eleven Central and Eastern European CEE countries and argues for agriculture's natural place in these societies The history of these countries is significant in how it has shaped the institutions and influenced the outcomes In many cases during communism agriculture was not considered a strategically An ecological consciousness did not figure high on the agendas of authoritarian regimes After 1990 some post communist farm economies progressed slower than others and environmental pressures mostly diminished with agricultural restructuring In parts of CEE increases in numbers of low input small farms have resulted in some though largely unintended ecological benefits A dual environmental challenge has nevertheless surfaced On one hand environmentally unsustainable practices have been attributed to some low input farming On the other hand risks of farm over intensification and resource overexploitation are on the rise Also environmental regulatory and institutional frameworks are not always effectively in place EU membership is not creating the anticipated benefits for farm growth There are a number of systemic structural barriers preventing many farmers from drawing on Common Agricultural Policy incentives and support The presence of many vulnerable poor farms is clearly problematic particularly economically However small scale farms could be made more acceptable and profitable by ensuring EU policies acknowledge their value and by building institutions to support alternative farm growth strategies aside from the traditional European model of individual corporate farm expansion The voluntary uptake of grassroots rural cooperation and farm associations may represent such an alternative Future European farm policy reforms need to reach the small and vulnerable and better tackle issues of farm equity poverty and agricultural sustainability in the new Europe This is a timely contribution as this type of transition has just begun This book should be of use to students and researchers looking at agricultural and environmental economics post communist rural

The Soviet Union and Global

Environmental Change Jonathan D. Oldfield, 2021-05-26 This book argues that the Soviet Union was a highly influential actor in furthering understandings of society nature interaction on the international stage and played a key role in helping to shape conceptualize and assess the relationship between humankind and the Earth system It considers how humankind's capacity to affect physical and biological systems at a global scale was acknowledged and studied by Soviet scientists discusses how the interaction between Soviet and Western scientists stimulated the development of new technologies and insights which simultaneously facilitated a more profound understanding of the Earth's physical and biological systems and explores how Soviet scientists drew upon pre revolutionary intellectual traditions in order to make sense of society nature interaction and did so in collaboration with a range of international initiatives Overall the book provides a deep analysis of how Soviet scientists conceptualized society nature interaction and influenced the understanding of global physical and biological systems Furthermore it is argued that this intellectual legacy remains of importance today with respect to the activities of Russian science and contemporary global environmental challenges

Environment in State-Socialist Hungary Viktor Pál, 2017-09-15 This book explains how and why the state socialist regime in Hungary used technology and propaganda to foster industrialization and the conservation of natural resources simultaneously Further this book explains why this process was ultimately a failure By exploring the environmental pre history of communist Hungary before analyzing the economic development of the K d r regime P l investigates how economic and environmental policies and technology transfer were negotiated between the official communist ideology and the global economic reality of capitalist markets P l argues that the modernization project of the K d r regime 1956 1990 facilitated ecological consciousness at both an individual and societal level which provoked great social unrest when positive environmental impact was not achieved Today global issues of climate change urban pollution resource depletion and overpopulation transcend political systems but economic and environmental discourses varied greatly in the twentieth century This volume is important reading for all those interested in economic and environmental history as well as political science

Globalization and New Geographies of Conservation Karl S. Zimmerer, 2006-09-15 Examining the geographical dimensions of environmental management and conservation activities implemented on landscapes worldwide Globalization and New Geographies of Conservation creates a new framework and collects original case studies to explore recent developments in the interaction of humans and their environment Globalization and New Geographies of Conservation makes four important arguments about the recent coupling of conservation and globalization that is reshaping the place of nature in human environmental change First it has led to an unprecedented number of spatial arrangements whose environmental management goals and prescribed activities vary along a spectrum from strict biodiversity protection to sustainable utilization involving agriculture food production and extractive activities Conservation and globalization are also leading by necessity to new scales of management in these activities that rely on environmental science thus shifting the spatial patterning of humans and the environment This interaction results as well in the unprecedented importance of boundaries and borders transnational border issues pose both opportunities and threats to global conservation proposed by organizations and institutions that are themselves international Lastly Globalization and New Geographies of Conservation argues that the local level has been integral to globalization while the regional level is often eclipsed at the peril of the successful implementation of conservation and management programs Bridging the gap between geography and life science Globalization and New Geographies of Conservation will appeal to a broad range of students of the environment conservation planning biodiversity management and development and globalization studies
