Environmental Radionuclides Klaus Froehlich,2009-09-23 Environmental Radionuclides presents a state of the art

summary of knowledge on the use of radionuclides to study processes and systems in the continental part of the Earth's environment. It is conceived as a companion to the two volumes of this series which deal with isotopes as tracers in the marine environment (Livingston) Marine Radioactivity and with the radioecology of natural and man-made terrestrial systems (Shaw) Radioactivity in Terrestrial Ecosystems. Although the book focuses on natural and anthropogenic radionuclides (radioactive isotopes) it also refers to stable environmental isotopes which in a variety of applications (especially in hydrology and climatology) have to be consulted to evaluate radionuclide measurements in terms of the ages of groundwater and climate archives respectively. The basic principles underlying the various applications of natural and anthropogenic radionuclides in environmental studies are described in the first part of the book. The book covers the two major groups of applications: the use of radionuclides as tracers for studying transport and mixing processes and as time markers to address problems of the dynamics of such systems (manifested commonly as the so-called residence time in these systems). The applications range from atmospheric pollution studies via water resource assessments to contributions to global climate change investigation. The third part of the book addresses new challenges in the development of new methodological approaches including analytical methods and fields of applications. A state-of-the-art summary of knowledge on the use of radionuclides. Conceived as a companion to the two volumes of this series which deal with isotopes as tracers. Evaluation of Environmental Data for Regulatory and Impact Assessment S. Ramamoorthy, E. Baddaloo, 1991-01-14. Mounting concern for the state of the environment has led to a substantial increase in the collection of environmental data in the past two decades. This trend raises issues with regard to the quality assurance and quality control of the data gathering process from sampling to analysis. The evaluation of environmental data in terms of quality and relevance for use in the management of toxic chemicals in the environment has reached a critical phase. An enormous volume of data is being generated on both residue levels and their effects to meet short and long-term needs for regulatory procedures and environmental impact assessments. Therefore it is important to verify not only the quality of the data collected but also the choice of relevant test parameters. This volume deals with the evolution of analytical methodologies to the current state-of-the-art techniques (quality assurance, quality control of data acquisitions and testing procedures for screening of toxic chemicals including their hazard identification, persistence and fate processes in the environment). The models currently employed in environmental impact assessment and risk assessment are also discussed in detail. Public involvement and participation in regulatory decision-making processes is also described. It is intended for managers and scientists involved in environmental management and research of toxic chemicals in the environment. Chemistry for the Protection of the Environment Lucjan

Pawlowski, William J. Lacy, J.J. Dlugosz, 2012-12-06. Over the last decade and a half an environmental conference series has emerged to become one of the major international forums on the chemical aspects of environmental protection. The forum is called Chemistry for the Protection of the Environment (CCPE). The sponsors of this CPE series have included the Chemical

Societies of Poland France Belgium Italy and the U S A the European Federation of Chemical Societies the American Institute of Chemical Engineers the American Society of Testing and Materials the International Ozone Association the United Nations Industrial Development Organization the Ministries of the Environment of Poland France Belgium and Italy US Environmental Protection Agency more than twenty universities and institutes of higher learning and five academies of sciences The first meeting in this series was organized in 1976 at the Marie Curie Sklodowska University in Lublin Poland The conference dealt with various physicochemical methodologies for water and wastewater treatment research projects that were jointly sponsored by US EPA and Poland

Risk, Science, and Politics Kathryn Harrison, George Hoberg, 1994-11-18

Paying particular attention to how politicians and bureaucrats in the two countries deal with the scientific uncertainty that pervades environmental decision making Harrison and Hoberg analyse case studies of seven controversial substances suspected of causing cancer in humans the pesticides Alar and alachlor urea formaldehyde foam insulation radon gas dioxin saccharin and asbestos They weigh the strengths and weaknesses of each country s approach according to five criteria stringency and timeliness of the regulatory decision balancing of risks and benefits by decision makers opportunities for public participation and the interpretation of science in regulatory decision making The Canadian approach is exemplified by closed decision making case by case review that relies heavily on expert judgement and limited public debate about the scientific basis of regulatory decisions In contrast regulatory science in the United States is characterized by publication of lengthy rationales for regulatory decisions reliance on standardized procedures for risk assessment and controversy surrounding the interpretation of scientific evidence

The indoor environment affects occupants health and comfort Poor environmental conditions and indoor contaminants are estimated to cost the U S economy tens of billions of dollars a year in exacerbation of illnesses like asthma allergic symptoms and subsequent lost productivity Climate change has the potential to affect the indoor environment because conditions inside buildings are influenced by conditions outside them Climate Change the Indoor Environment and Health addresses the impacts that climate change may have on the indoor environment and the resulting health effects It finds that steps taken to mitigate climate change may cause or exacerbate harmful indoor environmental conditions The book discusses the role the Environmental Protection Agency EPA should take in informing the public health professionals and those in the building industry about potential risks and what can be done to address them The study also recommends that building codes account for climate change projections that federal agencies join to develop or refine protocols and testing standards for evaluating emissions from materials furnishings and appliances used in buildings and that building weatherization efforts include consideration of health effects Climate Change the Indoor Environment and Health is written primarily for the EPA and other federal agencies organizations and researchers with interests in public health the
