Trade volumes in relation to the overall size of the economy are often much higher in developing countries than in industrial ones. The question that emerges from this trend is What impact does international trade have on economic growth and distribution in developing countries. In order to answer this question the present study derives empirical testable hypotheses from theoretical models thereby bridging the existing gap between theory and empirical studies. A broad range of trade variables derived from a growth model incorporating features from the new growth theories suggest deeper effects of trade on economic development that go beyond the standard openness correlations. Likewise the simulation of a trade reform on goods and factor prices shows insightful results on welfare changes for various Thai household categories. The distributional impacts do not correspond with the simple dichotomy of the rich getting richer and the poor becoming poorer. Forty Years of Renovating the Income Distribution in China Heng Quan, 2021-02-15 This book focuses on an attractive theoretical subject as well as a practical issue which analyses the inner relationship of economic growth and income distribution in China.
