Of Fears and Foes Jose V. Ciprut, 2001-09-30 At the end of the deadliest century known to mankind the world still finds itself mired in bloodshed In addition to formal inter state conflict we see an increase in other forms of organized violence including ethnic warfare terrorism civil conflict and internationally necessitated police actions Cornered by these powerful global forces nation states continue their quest for security Theirs is a search plagued by futility since the very meaning of the word security is being eroded by the pace and tenor of change in an evolving international environment more complex and confusing than ever The explanatory power of traditional notions of international security which has provided a cornerstone for international relations theory as a whole seems increasingly inadequate in helping to understand the makings of global security A novel approach is needed one that integrates discerning insights from the study of language history geography religion economics and technology with more traditional understandings of the workings of power on an international level and on an intranational scale Of Fears and Foes presents just this kind of innovative thinking by some of the most creative scholars working on these issues today Ciprut invites us to consider a fundamental reassessment of what constitutes security and insecurity in an emerging global environment

Cimbala,2012-02-02 In today s information age the coexistence of nuclear weapons with advanced conventional weapons and information based concepts of warfare is a military contradiction Nuclear deterrence was initially predicated on geopolitical military and technical assumptions These were based on Cold War politics rational deterrence theory the concept of mutual vulnerability and the fact that information and technology diffusion were limited Today however far from being obsolete nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction have not only survived but have become weapons for states that face security threats including perceived threats of nuclear blackmail or expectation of conflicts This study focuses on this unplanned coexistence of two distinct arts of war including the possibility that states like the U S may be held hostage to nuclear blackmail by outlier regimes or terrorists such as North Korea It shows that restricting nuclear proliferation should still be on the agenda of policymakers and calls for a revitalized global nonproliferation regime This unique survey by a leading expert will appeal to anyone interested in arms control nuclear proliferation and defense policy
