Employment Relations in the Asia-Pacific: Changing Approaches is an edited volume, which studies changing employment relations (ER) in seven Asia-Pacific countries. The study is spread over thirteen chapters, with the countries in question being categorized into three levels of economic development: the industrialized market economies (IME) of Australia, Japan and New Zealand, the newly industrialized economies (NIE) of South Korea and Taiwan, and the up-and-coming economies of China and Indonesia. Four main units of analyses are given attention in this book – the nation-state, trade unions, companies and the case of APEC as a supra-state organization. An introductory chapter serves to collate and further analyze the data from the other chapters. The editorial team is composed of academics and practitioners in the field of labour relations – Greg J. Bamber, Professor and Director of the Graduate School of Management, Griffith University, Funckoo Park, President of the Korea Labour Institute, Changwon Lee, Director for Labour Policy in the Office of the President, Republic of Korea, Peter K. Ross, a PhD candidate and Associate Lecturer at the School of International Business, and Kaye Broadbent, Associate Lecturer in the School of Industrial Relations, Griffith University.

The main thrust of the book is analyzing the changes to ER in the abovementioned countries since 1945. Following the thrust of Japan, these Asian countries have seen impressive economic growth, for many, in the aftermath of colonialism. The changes to ER are also discussed in light of the recent Asian economic crisis, which arguably set in on 2 July 1997 with the devaluation of the Thai bath following the bursting of the property and stock exchange bubbles which were pumped full of transitory portfolio equity. Following the lead of Dore (1979), this book discusses the contexts for ER which are treated as reflections of the level of economic development in the various countries.

Conceptually, the book is directed by two hypotheses. The first hypothesis is that as economies move towards becoming IMEs, they would tend to adopt ER practices and institutions that are found in already established IMEs. This follows the familiar Kerrian "convergence thesis", based on the "logic of industrialism", where technology is expected to bring about a similar set of structural and cultural features. Inputting national politics as a factor, the second hypothesis is that major political changes such as significant moves towards democratization would have a consequence on national perspectives on ER.

Women's Employment in Japan Kaye Broadbent, 2012-11-12. The low status accorded to part time workers in Japan has resulted in huge inequalities in the workplace. This book examines the problem in depth using case study investigations in Japanese workplaces and reveals the extent of the inequality. It shows how many part time workers, most of whom are women, are concentrated in low paid, low skilled, poorly unionised service sector jobs. Part time workers in Japan work hours equivalent to or greater than full time workers but receive lower financial and welfare benefits than their full time colleagues. Overall, the book demonstrates that the way part time work is constructed in Japan reinforces and institutionalises the sexual division of labour.

Although no one disputes that employment relations worldwide have been greatly affected by globalisation no clear consensus has emerged on the nature and significance of this impact The seven contributions to this symposium pursue a comparative approach suggesting that direct analysis of employment relations in distinct industries in two comparably sized economies since the advent of globalisation leads to a more precise understanding of the interaction of globalisation and employment relations and sets a pattern for other studies to follow The economies studied in the symposium are Australia and Korea and the industries are automobile and auto parts manufacturing and retail banking In both countries labour unions play a key role in the way in which employers and governments react to political and economic pressures Among the particular topics discussed by the contributors are the following effects of the 1997 financial crisis in Korea the extent to which the automobile industry in one country Korea depends on parts and raw material from another country Australia cross border cooperation between unions the growing trend toward enterprise bargaining conciliation and arbitration of industrial disputes and the role of government sponsored industrial relations commissions The contributing authors are all industrial relations authorities in Australia or Korea The in depth analysis they offer in these very specific areas will be of value to labour lawyers and industrial relations scholars everywhere for the light it sheds on this crucial aspect of contemporary social and economic development gathered here furthers understanding of the increasing disconnect between the prevailing institutional framework for employment relations and the sweeping changes that are taking place in the world of work With this book s analysis practitioners and policymakers will be able to overcome their dated assumptions and more effectively accommodate each others interests in the face of the complex mix of continuity and change that they are confronting The team of authors are experts in these countries They are active in policy or legal analysis business and or scholarship
