Reason and Emotion in International Ethics Renée Jeffery, 2014-06-12 The study of international ethics is marked by an overwhelming bias towards reasoned reflection at the expense of emotionally driven moral deliberation For rationalist cosmopolitans in particular reason alone provides the means by which we can arrive at the truly impartial moral judgments a cosmopolitan ethic demands However are the emotions as irrational selfish and partial as most rationalist cosmopolitans would have us believe By re examining the central claims of the eighteenth century moral sentiment theorists in light of cutting edge discoveries in the fields of neuroscience and psychology Ren e Jeffery argues that the dominance of rationalism and marginalisation of emotions from theories of global ethics cannot be justified In its place she develops a sentimentalist cosmopolitan ethic that does not simply provide a framework for identifying injustices and prescribing how we ought to respond to them but which actually motivates action in response to international injustices such as global poverty

outside the historical process against which they can be judged And if that historical process is simply an accidental episode in an indifferent universe what sorts of meanings can individual lives and choices have

What Develops in Emotional Development? Michael F.

Mascolo, Sharon Griffin, 2013-11-22 The problem of development is central in the study of emotional life for two basic reasons First emotional life so clearly changes dramatically in the early years with new emotional reactions emerging against the backdrop of an increasing sensitivity to context and with self regulation of emotion emerging from a striking dependence on regulatory assistance from caregivers Such changes demand developmental analysis At the same time understanding such profound changes will surely inform our understanding of the nature of development more generally The complexity of emotional change when grasped will reveal the elusive nature of development itself At the outset we know that development is complex We must take seriously what is present at any given phase including the newborn period because a developmental analysis disallows something emerging from nothing Still it is equally nondevelopmental to posit that new forms of new processes were simply present in their precursors Rather development is characterized by transformations in which more complex structures and organization emerge from new integration of prior components and new capacities These new forms and organizations cannot be specified from prior conditions but are due to transactions of the evolving organism with its environment over time They are not simply in the genome and they are not simply conditioned by the environment They are the result of the developmental process Feeling Power Megan Boler,2004-11-23 First published in 1999 Megan Boler combines cultural history with ethical and multicultural analyses to explore how emotions have been disciplined suppressed or ignored at all levels of education and in educational theory FEELING POWER charts the philosophies and practices developed over the last century to control social conflicts arising from gender class and race The book traces the development of progressive pedagogies from civil rights and feminist movements to Boler's own recent studies of emotional intelligence and emotional literacy Drawing on the formulation of emotion as knowledge within feminist psychobiological and post structuralist theories Boler develops a unique theory of emotion missing from contemporary educational discourses

Motivation and Emotion David C. Edwards,1999 How do culture and other people affect our eating habits Is love natural to humans Is anger always at the root of aggressive behaviors Aimed at unraveling the mysteries of human motivation and emotion author David C Edwards explores the evolutionary physiological social and cognitive factors that shape each motivational behavior from anger to sex to work and play Topically organized this volume provides readers with the best or contemporary findings in each motivational behavior and summarizes how past research in the field contributed to current thought Pride and Joy Kenneth Barish Ph.D.,2012-05-31 Pride and Joy is a different kind of parenting book In Pride and Joy child psychologist Kenneth Barish brings together the best of recent advances in clinical and neuroscience research with the author's three decades of experience working with children and families He shows how a deeper appreciation of our children's emotions offers parents a new understanding of their children's development and better solutions to the problems in their lives Barish offers advice to parents on how we can restore more joyfulness and pride in our relationships with our children and how we can help children bounce back from disappointment and defeat He shows how we can repair family relationships that have been damaged by frequent anger and resentment and how we can preserve our children's idealism and their concern for others how we can raise children who feel good about themselves and also care about the needs and feelings of others Barish also offers advice on how to solve problems of daily family life establishing rules and limits doing homework and going to sleep winning and losing at games our children's reluctance to talk to us their tantrums and lack of motivation and their addiction to television and video games He presents down to earth recommendations for solving these common family problems problems that too often erode the joyfulness of our children and our pleasure in being parents Pride and Joy is both informative and highly practical and a balanced answer to the extreme methods that too often dominate parenting debates Few parenting books address the central issues of concern to today's parents while also offering parents as much day to day advice Not Passion's Slave Robert C. Solomon,2003-01-30 The idea that we are in some significant sense responsible for our emotions is an idea that Robert Solomon has developed for almost three decades Here in a single volume he traces the development of this theory of emotions and elaborate it in detail

Two themes run through his work the first presents a cognitive theory of emotions in which emotions are construed primarily as evaluative judgments The second proposes an existentialist perspective in which he defends the idea that as we are responsible for our emotions Indeed sometimes it even makes sense to say that we choose them While the first claim has gained increasing currency in the literature his claim about responsibility for emotions has continued to meet with considerable resistance and misinterpretation The new emphasis on evolutionary biology and neurology has mistakenly reinforced the popular prejudice that emotions happen to us and are entirely beyond our control This volume is also a kind of intellectual memoir of Solomon's own development as a thinker The essays written in the 1980s elaborate the themes of the intentionality of emotion and the claim that emotions are judgments in this period he is also increasingly preoccupied with how emotions vary and are identified in a variety of cultures In the 1990 s his interests evolve to consider the social and political role of emotions and theories about emotion The final section presents his current philosophical position on the seeming passivity of the passions Despite his own critical assessment of his earlier work he continues to argue that in the final analysis we are responsible for our emotions and existential quality of our lives

Narrative Identities George Yancy, 2005 The contributors address challenging questions about identity in relation to personality development language and socialisation They demonstrate how their cultural and historical contexts influenced their theoretical approaches to the nature of self and how these ideas in turn shaped how they perceive their personal histories
