Employment and Multinationals in Asian Export Processing Zones Rudy Maex, 1983 Discusses the pattern of direct foreign investment by MNEs and its role in industrial development of export oriented industry manufacturing and in employment creation examines the geographic distribution of EPZs etc Employment Effects of Multinational Enterprises in Export Processing Zones in the Caribbean - a Joint ILO/UNCTC (United Nations Centre on Transnational Corporations) Research Project International Labour Office, 1986

Economic and Social Effects of Multinational Enterprises in Export Processing Zones Centre on Transnational Corporations (United Nations), 1988 One of the most remarkable structural changes which took place in the world economy in the 1970s and the first half of the 1980s is undoubtedly the growth of export processing zones EPZs in the developing countries and areas employment in these zones grew from around 50 000 in 1970 to over 1.3 million by 1986 Judging from the current plans for new EPZs in over a dozen countries and the expansion plans for existing zones it would seem that employment in EPZs could continue to grow rapidly in the next few years The phenomenon of EPZs and the role of multinational enterprises in them have been the subject of heated debate This monograph sheds light on the multinationals contribution to employment generation export earnings technology transfer and the development of linkages with the local economy These are measured against the initial cost of the incentive package for establishing and maintaining the zones Questions related to working conditions and labour relations are also highlighted The book confronts a number of widely held assumptions with the available facts and figures and points to the possible evolution of EPZs in the economies of newly industrializing countries It envisages the emergence of the export processing country and a more open and competitive approach to industrial development

Razavi, R. Pearson, C. Danloy, 2004-04-30 Gender and development theory and analysis is replete with implicit assumptions that women's entry into the world of paid work will positively affect their status both in the household and in the public sphere Until recently the debate on global factories and export production has remained focused on women's individual experience of export employment and the extent to which this represents a positive opportunity or gross exploitation In spite of the extended discussion of rights and citizenship in the global economy little attention has hitherto been paid to the implications for women's entitlements arising out of their pivotal role in export sectors Whilst many assume that women's visible and crucial presence in key economic sectors will be reflected in the ways in which social policies are formulated there has been up to now little empirical and analytical engagement with this question This volume bringing together detailed commissioned studies from six developing countries aims to fill this gap
