Intergenerational Cycles of Trauma and Violence: An Attachment and Family Systems Perspective Pamela C. Alexander, 2014-12-15 Exploring the conditions under which children as a function of their own abuse become abusive themselves That experiences from childhood affect our behavior in adulthood especially in the ways we treat our children and intimate partners is generally accepted Indeed theories of intergenerational transmission of violence indicate that if we ourselves have been abused and neglected as children we will likely be abusive and neglectful to others close to us thus extending the cycle across generations However many individuals who were maltreated as children do not replicate this cycle and such models make little sense of the individual raised in a good family who is violent either as a child or as an adult These discontinuities of cycles of violence and trauma have challenged professionals and nonprofessionals alike However broadening our vision and attending to new areas of research can help to illuminate this conundrum and open up new avenues of intervention In this book Pamela Alexander does just that She proposes that an increased risk for abusive behavior or revictimization as a function of one's own experiences of abuse or trauma in childhood can best be understood through the complementary lenses of attachment theory focusing on the relationship between the child and the caregiver and family systems theory focusing on the larger context of this relationship That is what a child acquires from her relationship with a caregiver is not simply a reflection of what she has learned from experiencing or witnessing abuse Rather it emerges from the child's felt experience of the relationship itself on implicit emotional physical and neurobiological levels Alexander founds the book on this multifaceted parent child attachment relationship and its place in the wider family system integrating clinical experience with close attention to the long term neurobiological and epigenetic effects of trauma She focuses on common outcomes of a history of maltreatment and of child sexual abuse in particular including peer victimization partner violence parenting problems and sexual offending A detailed review of the literature accompanies instructive case examples Sources of trauma from outside the family including combat exposure political terrorism foster care and incarceration of parents are considered Finally Alexander analyzes the multiple sources of natural resilience the neurobiological the individual the relational and the social to enable professionals of all backgrounds to tailor make effective interventions for interrupting cycles of trauma and violence

Educational Theories, Cultures and Learning focuses on how education is understood in different cultures, the theories and related assumptions we make about learners and students and how we think about them and how we can understand the principle actors in education: learners and teachers. Within this volume, internationally renowned contributors address a number of fundamental questions designed to take the reader to the heart of current debates around pedagogy, globalisation and learning and teaching such as: What role does culture play in our understanding of pedagogy? What role do global influences, especially economic, cultural and social, have in shaping our understanding of education? How does language influence our thinking about education? What implications does our view of childhood have for education? How do learners negotiate the transition between the different phases of education? How best can children learn the school knowledge? What is a teacher? And how do teachers learn? How do we understand learners, their minds, identity and development? To encourage reflection, many of the chapters also include questions for debate and a guide to further reading. Read alongside its companion volume Knowledge, Values and Educational Policy, readers will be encouraged to consider and think about some of the key issues facing education and educationists today. Handbook of Positive Psychology in Schools Michael J. Furlong, Richard Gilman, E. Scott Huebner, 2009-03-04

National surveys consistently reveal that an inordinate number of students report high levels of boredom, anger and stress in school, which often leads to their disengagement from critical learning and social development. If the ultimate goal of schools is to educate young people to become responsible and critically thinking citizens who can succeed in life, understanding factors that stimulate them to become active agents in their own learning is critical. A new field labeled positive psychology is one lens that can be used to investigate factors that facilitate a student's sense of agency and active school engagement The purposes of this groundbreaking Handbook are to 1 describe ways that positive emotions traits and institutions promote school achievement and healthy social emotional development 2 describe how specific positive psychological constructs relate to students and schools and support the delivery of school based services and 3 describe the application of positive psychology to educational policy making By doing so the book provides a long needed centerpiece around which the field can continue to grow in an organized and interdisciplinary manner Key features include Comprehensive this book is the first to provide a comprehensive review of what is known about positive psychological constructs and the school experiences of children and youth Topical coverage ranges from conceptual foundations to assessment and intervention issues to service delivery models Intrapersonal factors e g hope life satisfaction and interpersonal factors e g positive peer and family relationships are examined as is classroom and school level influences e g student teacher and school community relations Interdisciplinary Focus this volume brings together the divergent perspectives methods and findings of a broad interdisciplinary community of scholars whose work often fails to reach those working in contiguous fields Chapter Structure to insure continuity flow and readability chapters are organized as follows overview research summary relationship to student development examples of real world applications and a summarizing table showing implications for future research and practice Methodologies chapters feature longitudinal studies person centered approaches experimental and quasi experimental designs and mixed methods

Parenting: Selected Writings of Marc H. Bornstein Marc H. Bornstein, 2022-04-11 In the World Library of Psychologists series, international experts present career-long collections of what they judge to be their most interesting publications, extracts from books, key articles, research findings, and practical and theoretical contributions. Marc H. Bornstein has published widely in experimental, methodological, comparative, developmental, and cultural science, as well as neuroscience, pediatrics, and aesthetics. In this volume, he has collected an integrated series of his papers on parenting. Many disciplines over many centuries have expounded on parenting, but theory and opinion have prevailed. Bornstein initiated efforts to make parenting an evidence-based field of study through his journal Parenting Science and Practice, the Handbook of Parenting, and two monograph series, Monographs in Parenting and Studies in Parenting. In addition, Bornstein has undertaken empirical studies that address the determinants, nature, scope, and consequences of parenting. The writings selected for this collection symbolize the development of an empirical parenting science and the meaning and importance of parenting for the lives and well-being of children, parents, and society. Including a specially written introduction in which Marc Bornstein reflects on the importance of parenting and contextualizes both the field and the evolution of his wide-ranging career, this collection will serve as a valuable resource for students and researchers of parenting, developmental science, and all disciplines from anthropology to zoology concerned with nurturing, socializing, and educating the next generation.

Parenting Tom Luster, Lynn Okagaki, 2006-04-21 Parenting: An Ecological Perspective was originally created in 1993 to answer questions such as: Why do parents differ markedly in the ways in which they care for their children? What factors contribute to individual differences in parenting behavior? The framework used for addressing these questions is the ecological perspective developed by Urie Bronfenbrenner, who recognized that children's development is influenced by the interactions that they have over time with the people, objects, and symbols in their immediate environment Luster and Okagaki have updated the original text focusing on parental behavior and also included 6 new chapters covering topics such as fathers gender of parent children with special needs ethnicity and socioeconomic status and parent education The text summarizes the latest research on factors that influence parenting with each chapter providing a look at one important influence and the linkages among these various factors An ecological perspective draws attention to the fact that the lives of parents and children are intertwined and that understanding factors that influence parents is important for understanding the experiences of children
