

mg/kg BW differed significantly ($P < 0.05$). The multiple comparisons analysis revealed that the 100 NRT dose was associated with the highest HSP70 value, which was almost the same value as the 400 NRT dose group. Glutathione, which is similar to an antioxidant in NRT, regulates many cellular functions; it reduces hydrogen peroxide and peroxynitrite directly and indirectly with the help of glutathione peroxidase, detoxifies electrophiles, modulates reversible oxidation and reduction of protein thiols, and is crucially involved in the regulation of enzymes, transcription factors, and signal transduction (Oyagbemi et al., 2018). HSP70 expression improves postischemic ventricular recovery, and overexpression of HSP70 in transgenic rats improves postischemic cardiac function and reduces neuronal cell death (Gostimirovic et al., 2020). LPS-induced protection in hypertension and inflammation is due in part to suppression of NF- κ B activation and lymphocyte activation. Lipid peroxidation as well as superoxide and hydroxyl radical anion activity can be prevented and countered by the antioxidant action of haramonting (Situmorang et al., 2021b). Flavonoids in this plant extract can boost SOD and GSH-Px activity while also lowering MDA levels (Wu et al., 2015).

The multiple comparisons analysis revealed no significant differences ($P > 0.05$) between rats treated with NRT doses of 100 to 400 mg/kg BW. However, a significant difference was observed when all doses were compared with the C+ group ($P < 0.05$), as shown in Fig. 2c. HSP90 is a key player in the signalling pathway that leads to eNOS activation. HSP90 regulates vasomotor activity in resistance vessels by inhibiting HSP90 signalling, which plays a role in modulating vasoactive responses in blood vessels (Jones et al., 2011). Increased HSP90 signalling promotes NO-dependent vascular hyporeactivity, indicating a link between protein–protein interactions in hypertension (Ai et al., 2003).

4 Fas expressions after given Nano herbal R. tomentosa (NRT) to placental rats

According to the findings of the histopathological examination (Fig. 3), an increase in the number of syncytial nodes in all placental tissue preparations may be present in the mature placenta (Fig. 3a), but syncytial nodes are also present in the hypertensive placenta (Fig. 3b) because of the hypoxic state of the foetal placenta. Hypoxia causes the villi's ends or terminals to become irregularly shaped, increasing the likelihood of trophoblast accumulation and the creation of a syncytial knot. A shortage of oxygen perfusion caused an
