Television for Women Rachel Moseley, Helen Wheatley, Helen Wood, 2016-11-10 Television for Women brings together emerging and established scholars to reconsider the question of television for women In the context of the 2000s when the potential meanings of both terms have expanded and changed so significantly in what ways might the concept of programming addressed explicitly to a group identified by gender still matter The essays in this collection take the existing scholarship in this field in significant new directions They expand its reach in terms of territory looking beyond for example the paradigmatic Anglo American axis and also historical span Additionally whilst the influential methodological formation of production text and audience is still visible here the new research in Television for Women frequently reconfigures that relationship The topics included here are far reaching from television as material culture at the British exhibition in the first half of the twentieth century women s roles in television production past and present to popular 1960s television such as The Liver Birds and in the twenty first century highly successful programmes including Orange Is the New Black Call the Midwife One Born Every Minute and Wanted Down Under This book presents ground breaking research on historical and contemporary relationships between women and television around the world and is an ideal resource for students of television media and gender studies

Kavanaugh, 2003-06-06 Multidisciplinary essays on the effects of the internet on family life in particular parental oversight of children s use of the World Wide Web The use of the internet in homes rivals the advent of the telephone radio or television in social significance Daily use of the World Wide Web and e mail is taken for granted in many families and the computer linked internet is becoming an integral part of the physical and audiovisual environment The internet s features of personalization interactivity and information abundance raise profound new issues for parents and children Most researchers studying the impact of the internet on families begin with the assumption that the family is the central influence in preparing a child to live in society and that home is where that influence takes place In The Wired Homestead communication theorists and social scientists offer recent findings on the effects of the internet on the lives of the family unit and its members The book examines historical precedents of parental concern over new media such as television It then looks at specific issues surrounding parental oversight of internet use such as rules about revealing personal information time limits and web site restrictions It looks at the effects of the web on both domestic life and entire neighborhoods The wealth of information offered and the formulation of emerging issues regarding parents and children lay the foundation for further research in this developing field Contributors Robert Kraut Jorge Reina Schement Ellen Seiter Sherry Turkle Ellen Wartella and Barry Wellman

The Psychosocial Interior of the Family Gerald Handel, Gail G. Whitchurch, 1994 This long awaited fourth edition has the same goal as the preceding editions to understand families in terms of the kinds of interaction through which family life is constructed The changes in the family as an institution have influenced these processes just as they have influenced the ways we understand and write about them But even in these postmodern circumstances an underlying premise of the volume is that two partners establish a family because they have selected each other as distinctively meaningful to one another They will affirm modify elaborate or retreat from various aspects of the relationship through interaction over time and in changing circumstances This volume contains the best available interdisciplinary work on the social psychology of the family More than half of the selections are new to this edition which incorporates a variety of theoretical and research perspectives that provide the reader with a range of authoritative and up to date sources on the family and interpersonal relations The newer forms of family organization that have emerged in the more recent literature specifically single parent families stepfamilies and families of gay and lesbian domestic partners are included Authors have been drawn from a variety of disciplines including sociology communication family studies human development psychology anthropology and social work

Media Audiences John L. Sullivan, 2013 Whether we are watching TV surfing the Internet listening to our iPods or reading a novel we are all engaged with media as a member of an audience Despite the widespread use of this term in our popular culture the meaning of the audience is complex and it has undergone significant historical shifts as new forms of mediated communication have developed from print telegraphy and radio to film television and the Internet Media Audiences explores the concept of media audiences from four broad perspectives as victims of mass media as market constructions commodities as users of media and as producers subcultures of mass media The goal of the text is for students to be able to think critically about the role and status of media audiences in contemporary society reflecting on their relative power in relation to institutional media producers

Star Gazing Jackie Stacey, 2013-11-05 In a historical investigation of the pleasures of cinema Star Gazing puts female spectators back into theories of spectatorship Combining film theory with a rich body of ethnographic research Jackie Stacey investigates how female spectators understood Hollywood stars in the 1940 s and 1950 s Her study challenges the universalism of psychoanalytic theories of female spectatorship which have dominated the feminist agenda within film studies for over two decades Drawing on letters and questionnaires from over three hundred keen cinema goers Stacey investigates the significance of certain Hollywood stars in women s memories of wartime and postwar Britain Three key processes of spectatorship escapism identification and consumption are explored in detail in terms of their multiple and changing meanings for female spectators at this time Star Gazing demonstrates the importance of cultural and national location for the meanings of female spectatorship giving a new direction to questions of popular culture and female desire

The End of Television? Elihu Katz, Paddy Scannell, 2009-09-17

Is television dead The classic television era of the 1950s and 1960s characterized by limited choices of programs broadcast on over the air channels to families as if they were seated around a hearth and to a nation as if gathered around a campfire has indeed ended That early stage of sharedness and scarcity gave way to the television of plenty when satellite and cable and competition reigned choice was suddenly expanded and every room in the home had its own television set And now television offers infinite choices where we can view what we like when we like where we like on a variety of screens telephones and Web sites Some researchers assert that television is not dead but has merely moved from a collectivist to an individualist phase Throughout the drastic evolution of this media thousands of studies have examined the short term effects of television such as the evaluation of persuasion campaigns Yet there is scant research on the overreaching sociological impacts of television and its centrality to Western culture over the past 60 years This compelling volume of The ANNALS is the first collection of rigorous articles devoted to studying ways in which television has impacted our values ideologies institutions social structure and culture Focusing on classic television these leading experts in media studies delve into the effects on social institutions namely family and politics and its effects on values and everyday behavior These seminal articles lay the groundwork for innovative studies of the numerous ways that television has impacted democracy social integration nation and family trust and suspiciousness materialism and identity social and physical Students and researchers will find a wealth of inspiration for new research projects It is a must have resource for social scientists interested in media studies
