Empirical Approaches In Theology Les Approches Empiriques En Theology Theologies Pratiques 4:

Practical Theology J. A. van der Ven, 1998 The fundamental task of western theology is to provide an answer to the question how the major themes of christian faith can be made more relevant to present and future generations One of the most important problems is whether modern theology can adequately connect to the daily life of people and groups Until now it has failed to provide systematic and methodical answers to empirical questions and to incorporate these answers in theological thought For instance when and how do modern people have religious experiences which religious attitudes have an impact on their individual and social life how do they participate in the life of the church community and how does the relation between church and society take shape in ordinary life It is important not to leave the research on these issues to the social sciences alone but try to formulate analyse and answer these questions ourselves from a distinctive theological point of view This standard work contains a fundamental epistemological and methodological theory of empirical theology On the basis of empirical methodology and with the help of empirical tools a theological theory is developed On this theory many methodological technical insights and statistical instructions are based Empirical approaches in theology Groupe de recherches en études pastorales. Colloque, Marc Pelchat, Université Laval. Faculté de théologie, 1992 Hermeneutics And Empirical Research In Practical Theology C. A. Chris A. M. Hermans, Mary Elizabeth Moore, 2004 The contributors of this volume reflect on the writings of Hans van der Ven on the foundations of practical theology the empirical paradigm within practical theology and specific subdisciplines within practical theology especially religious education moral education church development and ministry Empirical Theology in Texts and Tables Leslie J. Francis, Mandy Robbins, Jeff Astley, 2009 Empirical theology offers fresh and stimulating insights into the concerns of both the Church and the Academy It does this by accessing relevant empirical evidence using the tools of the social sciences and placing this evidence in the context of theological critique and contemporary debate In this pioneering collection of focused essays leading experts of empirical theology illustrate key perspectives within this rapidly expanding discipline The first section of the book explores theoretical issues underpinning the main methods of obtaining empirical data and the use of these data within theology The other two sections display the role both of qualitative studies and of the analysis of quantitative data in exploring a range of theological beliefs and religious social and educational concerns Empirical Theology Randolph Crump Miller, 1992 The Future of Empirical Theology, 1969 The Future of Empirical Theology Fred Berthold, 1969 Huston Smith with Samuel Todes Empirical theology within process thought Bernard M Loomer Suffering and being in empirical theology Daniel Day Williams Christian coherence and human wholeness Paul Sponheim Is an empirical Christology possible Roger Hazelton Towards a new doctrine of man the relationship of man and nature Philip J Hefner Overcoming history with history some unfinished old business at the new frontiers of theology Gerhard Spiegler Can empirical theology learn something from phenomenology Bernard E Meland Intercommunion and cultural reality Joseph A Sittler Theology as critique of expostulation Joseph

Haroutunian New modes of empirical theology Langdon Gilkey Theology as an Empirical Science Douglas Clyde Macintosh, 2015-06-24 Excerpt from Theology as an Empirical Science A word of explanation seems called for in order to remove if possible an initial prejudice which is likely to be aroused by the title chosen for this volume Let it be understood from the first then that what is claimed here essentially is just this that it is possible to relate theological theory to that acquaintance with the divine which is to be found in religious experience at its best as the physical and social sciences with their theories as to the nature of things and persons are related to our common human acquaintance with things and persons in sense and social experience What is aimed at in almost all of the recognized empirical sciences is not a mere description of the processes of our experiencing otherwise individual psychology would be the only empirical science What we are after ordinarily is an adequate understanding of the nature of the things and persons with which ordinary experience makes us acquainted And if the reader comes finally to grant not only that genuine knowledge of a divine Reality has been gained through religious experience at its best but also that this knowledge may be formulated and further developed by means of the inductive procedure advocated and exemplified in the body of this book the author will not be disposed to quarrel with him over the comparatively unimportant question as to whether or not it is expedient to speak of the resultant theology as an empirical science In order that the theology may be viewed in relation to a harmonious philosophical background I have appended to the main discussion a sketch of the philosophy of religion with illustrations of a point of view and method which I have called Critical Monism About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works Hermeneutics and Empirical Research in Practical Theologie Chris A.M.
