Families And Mental Retardation New Directions In Professional Practice:

Families and Mental Retardation Diane Marsh, 1992-05-27 Traditional pathology models do not provide a satisfactory framework for professional practice with families of people with mental retardation Families and Mental Retardation is written from the perspective of a competence paradigm for professional practice which offers a constructive alternative to the more prevalent pathology models of the past The goal of professional practice is to empower families in coping with the catastrophic stressor of mental retardation Such an approach recognizes the strengths and resources of families which have often been minimized in the past and fosters new collaborative modes of family professional relationships Unique features include a consideration of life span and family system and subsystem perspectives as well as the inclusion of powerful personal accounts of family members The volume is likely to be of special value to mental health and health care professionals who often receive little training in mental retardation or family professional relations and who tend to apply a pathology model In contrast a competence paradigm is more prevalent in education

Families and the Mental Health System for Children and Adolescents Craig Anne Heflinger, Carol T. Nixon, 1996-03-26 Throughout this timely volume the contributors take into account the complexity and diversity of families today and the consequent impact on service delivery at the societal and policy levels

Families and Mental Illness Diane Marsh, 1992-04-13 This work is the most comprehensive volume to focus on new directions in professional practice with families of people with mental illness It offers a multidisciplinary systems oriented examination of theory research and practice in the area Unique features include a consideration of life span and family system and subsystem perspectives as well as the inclusion of powerful personal accounts of family members It is written from the perspective of a competence paradigm for clinical practice which offers a constructive alternative to the more prevalent pathology models of the past This work is the most comprehensive volume to focus on new directions in professional practice with families of people with mental illness It offers a multidisciplinary systems oriented examination of theory research and practice in the area Unique features include a consideration of life span and family system and subsystem perspectives as well as the inclusion of powerful personal accounts of family members It is written from the perspective of a competence paradigm for clinical practice which offers a constructive alternative to the more prevalent pathology models of the past In the era following deinstitutionalization families often have served as an extension of the mental health system There is much evidence that the needs of families are often poorly met In response to the shortcomings of the system and to their own anguish families have become increasingly assertive in articulating their needs for respect support information skills resources and services This volume is designed to provide professionals with increased understanding of the experiences and needs of families as well as with concrete suggestions for enhancing their effectiveness in meeting those needs The first three chapters are designed to explore general issues related to the family experience and family professional relationships the conceptual and empirical context and new directions in professional practice The next six chapters provide the experiential core of the volume covering such topics as life span perspectives the subjective and objective burden the family system family subsystems coping and adaptation and the needs of families The final three chapters are concerned with intervention including nonclinical strategies that are designed primarily to educate and support families and clinical strategies that are designed primarily to provide treatment The nonclinical and clinical intervention strategies that are discussed have the potential to comprise a full continuum of family oriented services that can be tailored to the needs desires and resources of particular families The final chapter is concerned with intervention on the level of the mental health system

Feminist Perspectives on Family Care Nancy R. Hooyman, Judith Gonyea, 1995-08-29 Today women find themselves playing an ever increasing role in caring for older family members who are frail developmentally disabled or suffering from serious mental illness While this role of women as caregivers has been documented the actual impact on the lives of women has remained largely unstudied In this volume the authors examine caregiving as a central feminist issue looking at its impact on women socially personally and economically The authors review how changing family structures the changing economy and workforce and the changing health care demands of needy adults have impacted on women's lives They critique existing public and private policies demonstrating a need for fundamental structural changes in social institutions and attitudes to improve the lives of women Finally they propose a social model of care that is oriented toward gender justice recognition of the work of caring and its impact upon women socially personally and economically For students scholars and practitioners in the field of gerontology gender studies and social work this book is a must
