Elections and Voters in Post-communist Russia Matthew Wyman, Stephen White, Sarah Oates, 1998 This study looks at the various different political structures that underpin elections and voting patterns in post Communist Russia Transitional Citizens Timothy J. COLTON, Timothy J Colton, 2009-06-30 Subjects obey Citizens choose Transitional Citizens looks at the newly empowered citizens of Russia s protodemocracy facing choices at the ballot box that just a few years ago under dictatorial rule they could not have dreamt of The stakes in post Soviet elections are extraordinary While in the West politicians argue over refinements to social systems in basically good working order in the Russian Federation they address graver concerns dysfunctional institutions individual freedom nationhood property rights provision of the basic necessities of life in an unparalleled economic downswing The idiom of Russian campaigns is that of apocalypse and mutual demonization This might give an impression of political chaos However as Timothy Colton finds voting in transitional Russia is highly patterned Despite their unfamiliarity with democracy subjects turned citizens learn about their electoral options from peers and the mass media and make choices that manifest a purposiveness that will surprise many readers Colton reveals that post Communist voting is not driven by a single explanatory factor such as ethnicity charismatic leadership or financial concerns but rather by multiple causes interacting in complex ways He gives us the most sophisticated and insightful account yet of the citizens of the new Russia Embodying Democracy S. Birch, F. Millard, M. Popescu, K. Williams, 2002-10-04 Embodying Democracy analyzes the politics of electoral reform in eight post communist states including Poland Hungary the Czech Republic Slovakia Romania Bulgaria Russia and Ukraine By exploring the multiple factors that shaped the design of electoral institutions during the first ten years of post communist transition it accounts for an important element of the post communist reform process and illuminates general features of institutional design in post transition states Elections and Democracy after Communism? E. Moser, 2001-01-15 Can democratization be promoted by getting the institutions right In Unexpected Outcomes Robert G Moser offers a compelling analysis of the extent to which institutions can be engineered to promote desired political outcomes The introduction of democracy in Eastern Europe and the former USSR has enabled scholars to bring new perspectives to the debate about electoral systems Russia is arguably the most important of the postcommunist states and its mixed electoral system provides an interesting controlled experiment for testing the impact of different electoral systems Moser examines the effects of electoral systems on political parties and representation in Russia during the 1990s Moser's study is not only a highly original contribution to our understanding of contemporary Russian politics but also a significant step forward in the comparative study of electoral systems Through his comprehensive empirical analysis of Russian elections Moser provides the most detailed examination of a mixed electoral system to date This system was introduced in Russia to encourage party formation and benefit reformist parties allied with President Yeltsin However the effects were contrary to what the creators of the system expected and also defied the most well established hypotheses in electoral studies Parties proliferated under both the PR and plurality halves of the election and patterns of women and minority representation ran counter to prevailing theory and international experience With an epilogue that updates the study through the December 1999 elections Unexpected Outcomes makes an important and timely contribution to the ongoing debate over the ability and inability of elites to fashion preferred political outcomes through institutional design place at the 1st of May 2004 the problem which has been addressed before is even more up to date Especially the recent argumentation about a common constitution which is overdue to both providing a proper legal capacity as well as a capability to act has been proving that the EU is still far away from a strong functioning political union But how is it possible to create such a proper union consisting of 25 members and most probably 27 by the year 2007 consisting of basically national states being still heavily occupied with dealing with their own backgrounds especially if one has a closer look the former communist states Is there any strategy of the lowest common denominator of policy advice or do one have to identify the communist past in relation to present developments Facing this problem the main purpose of this analysis will be an evaluation of different political transition theories and rating strategies which have been particularly taken into account by the former states behind the iron curtain Finally this work is aiming at a probably existing connection between a successful political transition and a deeper integration into the European Union For that reason the fir
