Müller, 2012-12-06 The present volume and volume I Hector New Ways in Education and Research present the results of HECTOR the four year cooperation project between the University of Karlsruhe and IBM Germany represented by the European Networking Center and Scientific Center in Heidelberg as well as IBM Research in Riischlikon The project was started in spring 1984 and will end in April 1988 with a congress This congress addresses the scientific community to present experiences and results with a program of lectures and demonstrations The HECTOR Project has two major aspects the first is to explore new ways in university education The second aspect of HECTOR comprises basic research work to develop new technological concepts for the establishment of computer communication networks supporting academic research and education in all disciplines The underlying concept is that now and in the future computer software and communication systems which are required for the broad range of scientific and educational tasks will be of different technical orientation and made by different manufacturers These diverse systems will however need to coexist and cooperate side by side Today in most cases different hardware and software architectures of different manufacturers prevent a scientist or student from choosing freely the computer and software which offers the best alternative for solving his or her current problem The mutual cooperation of the academic users is also hindered substantially by the many incompatibilities present The users future is therefore transparency in a heterogeneous environment      The Works of M. de Voltaire:

Processing, 1978      Mechanism, Mentalism and Metamathematics J. Webb, 2013-03-09 This book grew out of a graduate student paper 261 in which I set down some criticisms of J R Lucas attempt to refute mechanism by means of Gödel's theorem I had made several such abortive attempts myself and had become familiar with their pitfalls and especially with the double edged nature of incompleteness arguments My original idea was to model the refutation of mechanism on the almost universally accepted Gödelian refutation of Hilbert's formalism but I kept getting stuck on questions of mathematical philosophy which I found myself having to beg A thorough study of the foundational works of Hilbert and Bernays finally convinced me that I had all too naively and uncritically bought this refutation of formalism I did indeed discover points of surprisingly close contact between formalism and mechanism but also that it was possible to undermine certain strong arguments against these positions precisely by invoking Gödel's and related work I also began to realize that the Church Turing thesis itself is the principal bastion protecting mechanism and that Gödel's work was perhaps the best thing that ever happened to both mechanism and formalism I pushed these lines of argument in my dissertation with the patient help of my readers Raymond Nelson and Howard Stein I would especially like to thank the latter for many valuable criticisms of my dissertation as well as some helpful suggestions for reorganizing it in the direction of the present book

Advanced Arithmetic for the Digital Computer Ulrich W. Kulisch, 2012-09-07 The number one requirement for computer arithmetic has always been speed It is the main force that drives the technology With increased speed larger problems can be attempted To gain speed advanced processors and programming languages offer for instance compound arithmetic operations like matrix multiplication and dot product But there is another side to the computational coin the accuracy and reliability of the computed result Progress on this side is very important if not essential Compound arithmetic operations for instance should always deliver a correct result The user should not be obliged to perform an error analysis every time a compound arithmetic operation implemented by the hardware manufacturer or in the programming language is employed This treatise deals with computer arithmetic in a more general sense than usual Advanced computer arithmetic extends the accuracy of the elementary floating point operations for instance as defined by the IEEE arithmetic standard to all operations in the usual product spaces of computation the complex numbers the real and complex intervals and the real and complex vectors and matrices and their interval counterparts The implementation of advanced computer arithmetic by fast hardware is examined in this book Arithmetic units for its elementary components are described It is shown that the requirements for speed and for reliability do not conflict with each other Advanced computer arithmetic is superior to other arithmetic with respect to accuracy costs and speed
