Exploring the Evolution of our Ancestors Dominique Adriaens, 2025-08-18 This is a captivating evolutionary narrative of the human body exploring the pivotal traits that make humans unique as a species It provides a better understanding of why we look the way we do through an evolutionary morphological lens by delving into the functional explanations for the unique characteristics of us and our ancestors and the evolutionary pathways that shaped them It integrates changes in anatomy with functional shifts but also with underlying genetic and environmental transformations that drove our evolution The main body of the book focuses around four fundamental themes that have evolutionarily sculpted us into who we are today ever since the shared origin with the chimpanzee diet brain locomotion and skin This book not only promises to enrich our understanding of human evolution but also challenges us to reconsider what it means to be human in light of our ancient lineage and ongoing evolutionary journey It also Provides a complete overview of the major events of human evolution Helps readers understand why our body has been shaped the way it is Integrates genes anatomy function behavior and ecology creating a more complete picture written in an accessible text while incorporating many facts and figures building upon both historic and recent literature Offers an up to date view of how anthropologists currently see our evolution Focuses on four fundamental changes in the brain diet skin and locomotion Explains some aspects of what humans are experiencing today e g why some people are lactose intolerant

Solution Focused Interactions in Nursing S.W. Smith, 2021-01-29 Nursing is about growth yet it spends so much time focusing on disease and entropy While the nursing role is expanding into advanced practice roles and twenty first century nursing is almost unrecognisable compared to its nineteenth century roots at the heart of nursing is growth Sometimes called caring growth requires nurturing and while it is difficult to define without it nurses are merely medical technicians In the context of nursing health is about change change from a less healthy state to a more healthy state and the nurse s role is to promote that change whenever possible However change is difficult we are creatures of habit afraid of change and preferring the illusion of safety with the devil we know rather than the devil we don t know However when someone is ready to change they have already grown This book combines the author s twenty five years of experience in Solution Focused Interactions and empirical evidence derived from his PhD research to argue that Solution Focused Interactions provide a means for nurses in all domains of nursing and midwifery to provide care that promotes growth and change in the people they work with while restoring and maintaining their enthusiasm for practice This book serves as an eminently practical introduction to how Solution Focused Interactions can be used across nursing practice making use of transcripts and case studies to illustrate the ways in which nurses can help their patients to grow and change while also growing and changing themselves

Algorithms Are Not Enough Herbert L. Roitblat, 2020-10-13 Why a new approach is needed in the quest for general artificial intelligence Since the inception of artificial intelligence we have been warned about the imminent arrival of computational systems that can replicate human thought processes Before we know it computers will become so intelligent that humans will be lucky to be kept as pets And yet although artificial intelligence has become increasingly sophisticated with such achievements as driverless cars and humanless chess playing computer science has not yet created general artificial intelligence In Algorithms Are Not Enough Herbert Roitblat explains how artificial general intelligence may be possible and why a robocalypse is neither imminent nor likely Existing artificial intelligence Roitblat shows has been limited to solving path problems in which the entire problem consists of navigating a path of choices finding specific solutions to well structured problems Human problem solving on the other hand includes problems that consist of ill structured situations including the design of problem solving paths themselves These are insight problems and insight is an essential part of intelligence that has not been addressed by computer science Roitblat draws on cognitive science including psychology philosophy and history to identify the essential features of intelligence needed to achieve general artificial intelligence Roitblat describes current computational approaches to intelligence including the Turing Test machine learning and neural networks He identifies building blocks of natural intelligence including perception analogy ambiguity common sense and creativity General intelligence can create new representations to solve new problems but current computational intelligence cannot The human brain like the computer uses algorithms but general intelligence he argues is more than algorithmic processes
