Electronic Boy From The Portmanteau:

Electronic Boy from the Portmanteau Yevgeny Veltistov, 2002-12-01 You've probably guessed what Electronic is. Right? He's a boy robot. But the cream of the joke is that by sheer chance he turns out to be the live double of a schoolboy Sergei Cheesekov. They meet and make friends and immediately fantastic and funny adventures happen to them both. Sergei quickly gains fame as a World Champion runner, an animal trainer, and an honor pupil at school, but that's enough. Read the book yourselves and join Sergei and Electronic at a math lesson in a Moscow school, see the circus with them, and visit the cybernetics laboratory of Professor Gromov. Finally, when the cat's out of the bag and their secret is discovered, join the children who teach Electronic to laugh. Wouldn't it be fun if you had a friend like Electronic?

In Motion and Representation Nicol's Salazar Sutil considers the representation of human motion through languages of movement and technological mediation. He argues that technology transforms the representation of movement and that representation in turn transforms the way we move and what we understand to be movement. Humans communicate through movement physically and mentally. To record and capture integrated movement both bodily and mental by means of formal language and technological media produces a material record and cultural expression of our evolving kinetic minds and identities. Salazar Sutil considers three forms of movement inscription: a written record, notation, a visual record, animation, and a computational record, motion capture. He focuses on what he calls kinetic formalism: formalized movement in such pursuits as dance, sports, live animation, and kinetic art, as well as abstract definitions of movement in mathematics and computer science. He explores the representation of kinetic space and spatiotemporality, the representation of mental plans of movement, movement notation including stave notation, Labanotation, and such contemporary forms of notation as Choreographic Language Agent and the impact of digital technology on contemporary representations of movement in particular motion capture technology and Internet transfer.
