Electronics For Boys Girls:

Plastics for Electronics M. Goosey, 2012-12-06 Much of the progress towards ever greater miniaturisation made by the electronics industry from the early days of valves to the development of the transistor and later the integrated circuit has only been made possible because of the availability of various polymeric materials. Indeed many new plastics have been developed specifically for electrical and electronic device applications and as a consequence the plastics and electronics industries have continued to grow side by side. Electronic components are one of the few groups of products in which the real cost performance function has declined significantly over the years and part of the reason can be directly attributed to the availability and performance of new polymeric materials. The evolution of the personal computer is a specific example where improvements in polymer based photoresists and plastic encapsulation techniques have allowed the mass production of high density memories and microprocessors at a cost which yields machines more powerful than mainframe computers of 30 years ago for little more than the price of a toy. Today plastic materials are widely used throughout all areas of electrical and electronic device production in diverse applications ranging from alpha particle barriers on memory devices to insulator mouldings for the largest bushings and transformers. Plastics or more correctly polymers find use as packaging materials for individual microcircuits, protective coatings, wire and cable insulators, printed circuit board components, die attach adhesives, equipment casings and a host of other applications.

Imagination and Play in the Electronic Age Dorothy G Singer, Jerome L. Singer, 2009-06-30 Television, video games and computers are easily accessible to twenty first century children but what impact do they have on creativity and imagination? In this book two wise and long admired observers of children's make-believe look at the cognitive and moral potential and concern created by electronic media.

The Future of Electronic Learning M. A. White, 2013-12-16 First Published in 1983. The papers in this volume were originally presented at a conference on The Future of Electronic Learning held at Teachers College, Columbia University in April of 1982, sponsored by the Electronic Learning Laboratory. Each paper has been revised for a reading audience rather than a listening audience but the original questions from the audience and their answers have been retained as they give a sense of the conference and provide interesting information. The subtitle of the conference was Implications for Psychology and Education. The reader will find that the papers address both the new kinds of learning that will develop as a result of learning from electronic technology as well as the new forms of teaching that will be needed. The purpose of the conference was to bring together an unusual group of experts who could address these questions for the future with special knowledge of the technology combined with a concern for education.
