Meanwhile the growing role of FDI in host countries has been accompanied by a change of attitude from critical wariness toward multinational corporations to sometimes uncritical enthusiasm about their role in the development process What are the most valuable benefits and opportunities that foreign firms have to offer What risks and dangers do they pose Beyond improving the micro and macroeconomic fundamentals in their own countries and building an investment friendly environment do authorities in host countries need a proactive rather than passive policy toward FDI In one of the most comprehensive studies on FDI in two decades Theodore Moran synthesizes evidence drawn from a wealth of case literature to assess policies toward FDI in developing countries and economies in transition His focus is on investment promotion domestic content mandates export performance requirements joint venture requirements and technology licensing mandates The study demonstrates that there is indeed a large energetic and vital role for host authorities to play in designing policies toward FDI but that the needed actions differ substantially from conventional wisdom on the topic Dr Moran offers a pathbreaking agenda for host governments aimed at maximizing the benefits they can obtain from FDI while minimizing the dangers and suggests how they might best pursue this agenda
