In the American Grain Elizabeth Hutton Turner, Phillips Collection, 1995 During the 1920s and 1930s Alfred Stieglitz s stylish New York galleries were a mecca to artistic innovators and avant garde thinkers those struggling to cast off the burden of American puritanical thought and the fixed idea among the intellectual elite that important art art that was real and would last was being made only in Europe At the same time Duncan Phillips a determined art collector and heir to a steel fortune opened two rooms of his Washington D C home to begin a museum of modern art Although he collected some of the world s masterpieces especially French Impressionism he kept a diligent eye on the work being done in his own country That Stieglitz and Phillips would meet was destiny Their long friendship sometimes an uneasy alliance brought forth a reevaluation of art in American culture Their combined vision and resources invigorated a movement and prepared the way for public acceptance of American modernism The uniquely American style of the artists in the Stieglitz circle Arthur Dove Marsden Hartley John Marin and Georgia O Keeffe defied European tradition and opened the door for artistic experimentation In the American Grain gathers the Stieglitz circle as acquired by Phillips paintings by all four artists watercolors by Dove and Marin assemblages by Dove and Stieglitz s Equivalents his acclaimed photographs of clouds and sky The bold original style of the works included here stand together to signal a shift in the development of art its coming of age in America

Henderson,2018-05-18 The long awaited new edition of a groundbreaking work on the impact of alternative concepts of space on modern art In this groundbreaking study first published in 1983 and unavailable for over a decade Linda Dalrymple Henderson demonstrates that two concepts of space beyond immediate perception the curved spaces of non Euclidean geometry and most important a higher fourth dimension of space were central to the development of modern art The possibility of a spatial fourth dimension suggested that our world might be merely a shadow or section of a higher dimensional existence That iconoclastic idea encouraged radical innovation by a variety of early twentieth century artists ranging from French Cubists Italian Futurists and Marcel Duchamp to Max Weber Kazimir Malevich and the artists of De Stijl and Surrealism In an extensive new Reintroduction Henderson surveys the impact of interest in higher dimensions of space in art and culture from the 1950s to 2000 Although largely eclipsed by relativity theory beginning in the 1920s the spatial fourth dimension experienced a resurgence during the later 1950s and 1960s In a remarkable turn of events it has returned as an important theme in contemporary culture in the wake of the emergence in the 1980s of both string theory in physics with its ten or eleven dimensional universes and computer graphics Henderson demonstrates the importance of this new conception of space for figures ranging from Buckminster Fuller Robert Smithson and the Park Place Gallery group in the 1960s to Tony Robbin and digital architect Marcos Novak Beyond the Screen Marta Braun,Charlie Keil,Rob King,Paul Moore,2012-08-22 This scholarly anthology presents a new framework for understanding early cinema through its usage outside the realm of entertainment From its earliest origins until the beginning of the twentieth century cinema provided widespread access to remote parts of the globe and immediate reports on important events Reaching beyond the nickelodeon
