Making Peace Eytan Bentsur, 2000-10-30 Sitting around one oval table for the first time at the Madrid Conference in 1991 historic Arab and Israeli enemies pledge to work toward regional peace and security From Madrid onward Middle East diplomacy has been pursued on two tracks between Israel and its immediate neighbors and among all the countries of the region This book reveals for the first time an insider's account of the true significance of the Madrid Conference and how a revolution in Middle Eastern affairs was wrought there Making Peace details the debates doubts reversals and accomplishments that crystallized at the Madrid Peace Conference in October 1991 In the months leading up to this historic event Eytan Bentsur today Director General of the Israeli Foreign Ministry worked closely with his counterparts from other countries to find a formula that might bridge the bitter and seemingly intractable rivalry between Israelis and Arabs This formula was to become known as the famous two track approach and is an important source of the incredible progress made toward regional peace and security in recent times Arguing persuasively that the Middle East

peace revolution was triggered by the Madrid gathering Bentsur sheds new light on the leading personalities and ideas that made the conference a success and a foundation for future progress An Israeli official who belonged to an avowed peace group within a hesitant government Bentsur devised new formulas that made the advantages of peace more palpable to a national leadership and public that were sometimes obsessed with the problems of the peace process The book elucidates the origins rationale and impact of the two track approach It is a gripping behind the scenes account of diplomatic efforts in the cause of peace in a war torn part of the globe

Possible Solutions for the Israeli-Palestinian Conflict. Framework of Negotiations for a Hegemonic Coalition Sven Hentschel, 2014-09-30 Research Paper undergraduate from the year 2012 in the subject Politics Topic Peace and Conflict Security grade 1.0 Ewha Womans University Graduate School of International Studies course International Negotiations language English abstract Throughout history there have been many attempts to establish peace between Israel and Palestine but all of these attempts were to no avail This term paper will examine the underlying problem why all these attempts could not lead to a mutually satisfactory solution and will then describe what needs to be done in order to establish a new and sustainable peace agreement between Israel and Palestine To do so this paper firstly illustrates the historical background of previous peace negotiations before describing the complex relationship of Israel and Palestine on an internal regional and external level It will then look at the opposed positions of both parties and illustrates to what extent the model of the Prisoner's Dilemma can explain the situation that both sides are facing Based on these findings ways how to potentially resolve this dilemma will be presented The most promising solution of a Hegemonic Coalition that can put pressure on both parties to negotiate with each other over interests rather than positions will be explained in detail Especially the framework under what conditions the negotiations should take place to avoid mistakes made by the Oslo peace negotiations will be addressed Under consideration of that framework this paper develops a potential solution how the agreement between Israel and Palestine could look like to achieve peace between both parties The Israel Palestine peace process can be seen as a series of attempts to establish a lasting end to the Israeli Palestinian conflict Some of these attempts were more promising than others but until now none of them could establish peace between both parties 6 The decision tree in the appendix Figure 1 helps to give a short overview of the main stages taken towards peace in the region Throughout that paper some of these stages will need to be examined in further detail but for now this overview is sufficient to see that negotiations between both parties continuously failed mainly due to the unstable political environment within Israel and Palestine
