Landscape, Process and Power Serena Heckler,2012 In recent years the field of study variously called local indigenous or traditional environmental knowledge TEK

has experienced a crisis brought about by the questioning of some of its basic assumptions This has included reassessing notions that scientific methods can accurately elicit and describe TEK or that incorporating it into development projects will improve the physical social or economic well being of marginalized peoples The contributors to this volume argue that to accurately and appropriately describe TEK the historical and political forces that have shaped it as well as people's day to day engagement with the landscape around them must be taken into account TEK thus emerges not as an easily translatable tool for development experts but as a rich and complex element of contemporary lives that should be defined and managed by indigenous and local peoples themselves OECD Environmental Outlook OECD,2001-04-05 The OECD Environmental Outlook provides economy based projections of environmental pressures and changes in the state of the environment to 2020

World Felix Thiele,R.E. Ashcroft,2005-12-29 The world seems ever smaller and ever quicker environmental public health industrial and cultural processes operate ever more on a global rather than a local scale Does this process sometimes known as globalisation draw us closer together or drive us further apart from a moral point of view In recent years bioethics has addressed many of the issues that arise in the context of globalisation solidarity conflict and autonomy human rights liberty and toleration the political and economic context of health care and inequalities in health environmental and public health change At the same time bioethics has often been merely an agent of obscure political forces and has been challenged for its emphasis on autonomy over considerations of justice This study brings together scientists from the fields of medicine law and philosophy The texts are the results of a conference the Europäische Akademie held in 2003 The group developed its thesis in open discussions of foundational and applied problems of bioethics from an interdisciplinary and international perspective to conserve crop genetic resources on the basis of theoretical and applied studies. It aims to serve decision makers at different levels with information on the costs involved in the conservation of genetic resources and hence to increase the awareness of the importance of improving the cost effectiveness of different conservation methods in order to optimize the sustainability of conservation. The quoted Leipzig Declaration which was adopted at the Fourth International Technical Conference on Plant Genetic Resources in Leipzig in June 1996 demonstrates the close linkage of the contributions to the ongoing discussion about the implementation of the Global Plan of Action for the Conservation and Sustainable Utilization of Plant Genetic Resources for Food and Agriculture.

Eco labelling programmes have been in existence for many years but their recent growth now extends to many products and services. The academic literature has grown in response and there have been several theoretical and empirical advances. This volume presents the best of previously published research on the design and effects of eco labelling programmes. Whilst concentrating on the economic literature, the articles also approach the topic from a psychological, sociological and political point of view. Part One focuses on a range of theoretical developments. Part Two on empirical measurements of the effectiveness of eco labelling. Part Three on the factors that influence the success and design of eco labelling programmes and Part Four on the effects of eco labelling on international trade and development.
