Teamwork in Palliative Care Peter Speck, 2006-09-14 Teamwork is a complex but essential component of palliative care. The needs of people diagnosed with life threatening disease will vary greatly over time and it is rarely possible for just one professional to be able to provide adequate care. In order to ensure an holistic approach the whole multi disciplinary team must be involved. Inevitable questions arise from such an approach and this book seeks to address these. How does a team come into being? What different formats are there? How might the patient contribute to the effectiveness of their care and the way in which the team operates? What are the difficulties and frustrations encountered in developing and maintaining such teams? What models of working and styles of leadership have developed? How are power and authority handled within the team setting? The importance of team building training support attention to group process and stress management to protect the mental health of the team are explored. The ethical issues inherent in palliative care such as consent autonomy confidentiality decision making within teams and the legal implications of such are also discussed. The book concludes with one important question: do we know if teams are the most effective way of providing care? This book addresses key issues surrounding the role of the team in palliative care and is an essential guide to reappraising the importance of collaborative teamwork and enhancing understanding of existing team structures.

Safety at the Sharp End Rhona Flin, Paul O'Connor, 2017-05-15

Many 21st century operations are characterised by teams of workers dealing with significant risks and complex technology in competitive commercially driven environments. Informed managers in such sectors have realised the necessity of understanding the human dimension to their operations if they hope to improve production and safety performance. While organisational safety culture is a key determinant of workplace safety, it is also essential to focus on the non-technical skills of the system operators based at the sharp end of the organisation. These skills are the cognitive and social skills required for efficient and safe operations, often termed Crew Resource Management (CRM) skills. In industries such as civil aviation, it has long been appreciated that the majority of accidents could have been prevented if better non-technical skills had been demonstrated by personnel operating and maintaining the system. As a result, the aviation industry has pioneered the development of CRM training. Many other organisations are now introducing non-technical skills training, most notably within the healthcare sector.

Safety at the Sharp End is a general guide to the theory and practice of non-technical skills for safety. It covers the identification, training and evaluation of non-technical skills and has been written for use by individuals who are studying or training these skills on CRM and other safety or human factors courses. The material is also suitable for undergraduate and post-experience students studying human factors or industrial safety programmes. The Oxford Handbook of Health Care Management Ewan Ferlie, Kathleen Montgomery, Anne Reff Pedersen, 2016. The Oxford Handbook of Healthcare Management offers a variety of current scholarly perspectives which explore important policy developments in health care management on an international basis.

Cultivating Creative Collaboration in Student Virtual Teams in Higher Education: Design and Climate Nemiro, Jill E., 2025-07-16. Over the last twenty years, creativity has been shown to be a critical element to contemporary organizations, especially as global competition, the need for innovation and technological advances have intensified. The rise of technological advances has produced an increase in remote work and virtual teams, especially within business settings, to deal with global competition and the rise of non-routine work. However, the COVID 19 pandemic generated an even greater increase in the utilization of remote work and virtual teams, not only in business but in higher education as well, and it appears that this trend is not going away. Thus, it is crucial to teach students how to work effectively in virtual teams to prepare them for their future careers Training current employees in virtual teaming skills is also necessary as more professionals are transitioning into remote or hybrid work Cultivating Creative Collaboration in Student Virtual Teams in Higher Education Design and Climate provides an in depth understanding of how to design academic courses and business training experiences that can offer employees and college level students hands on experiences to develop virtual teamwork skills It aims to nurture students professional development by enhancing their creativity while working in virtual teams and to assist faculty in designing and implementing effective virtual team learning experiences in their courses Covering topics such as intentional team culture information sharing and setting communication norms this book is an excellent resource for educational leaders educators instructional designers technology instructors human resource HR managers business leaders professionals researchers scholars academicians and more
