An Ecological Approach to Perceptual Learning and Development Eleanor J. Gibson, Anne D. Pick, 2003-05-15 The essential nature of learning is primarily thought of as a verbal process or function but this notion conveys that pre linguistic infants do not learn Far from being blank slates that passively absorb environmental stimuli infants are active learners who perceptually engage their environments and extract information from them before language is available The ecological approach to perceiving defined as a theory about perceiving by active creatures who look and listen and move around was spearheaded by Eleanor and James Gibson in the 1950s and culminated in James Gibson's last book in 1979 Until now no comprehensive theoretical statement of ecological development has been published since Eleanor

Gibson's Principles of Perceptual Learning and Development 1969 In An Ecological Approach to Perceptual Learning and Development distinguished experimental psychologists Eleanor J Gibson and Anne D Pick provide a unique theoretical framework for the ecological approach to understanding perceptual learning and development Perception in accordance with James Gibson's views entails a reciprocal relationship between a person and his or her environment The environment provides resources and opportunities for the person and the person gets information from and acts on the environment The concept of affordance is central to this idea the person acts on what the environment affords as it is appropriate This extraordinary volume covers the development of perception in detail from birth through toddlerhood beginning with the development of communication going on to perceiving and acting on objects and then to locomotion It is more than a presentation of facts about perception as it develops It outlines the ecological approach and shows how it underlies higher cognitive processes such as concept formation as well as discovery of the basic affordances of the environment This impressive work should serve as the capstone for Eleanor J Gibson's distinguished career as a developmental and experimental psychologist

Research in Education, 1974

The relationship between music and language Lutz Jäncke, Traditionally music and language have been treated as different psychological faculties This duality is reflected in older theories about the lateralization of speech and music in that speech functions were thought to be localized on the left and music functions on the right hemisphere But with the advent of modern brain imaging techniques and the improvement of neurophysiological measures to investigate brain functions an entirely new view on the neural and psychological underpinnings of music and speech has evolved The main point of convergence in the findings of these new studies is that music and speech functions have many aspects in common and that several neural modules are similarly involved in speech and music There is also emerging evidence that speech functions can benefit from music functions and vice versa This new research field has accumulated a lot of new information and it is therefore timely to bring together the work of those researchers who have been most visible productive and inspiring in this field and to ask them to present their new work or provide a summary of their laboratory's work
