warmer Among scientists concerned with global climate change this is the broad consensus How fast and by how much are questions which cannot be answered quantitatively but the probability of rising temperatures must be faced in a prudent manner there is enough certainty of change so that we must anticipate and prepare before irreparable damage is done to our world Even if it isn't going to be as bad as some people think the actions we propose will benefit the earth and give us a kind of insurance The root of the change is population growth and its attendant demand for energy While the developed world expects to hold future emissions relatively steady the developing countries where population growth is most rampant will expand the use of energy as they aspire to a better quality of life H greater energy use is inevitable it behooves us to produce that energy in the least objectionable manner and to produce it where the cost is lowest in dollars GNP and environmental change

Innovative Energy Strategies for CO2 Stabilization Robert G. Watts, 2002-07-11 The vast majority of the world's climate scientists believe that the build up of heat trapping CO₂ in the atmosphere will lead to global warming unless we burn less fossil fuels At the same time energy must be supplied in increasing amounts for the developing world to continue its growth This book discusses the feasibility of increasingly efficient energy use and the potential for supplying energy from sources that do not introduce CO₂ The book analyses the prospects for Earth based renewables solar wind biomass hydroelectricity geothermal and ocean energy It then discusses nuclear fission and fusion and the relatively new idea of harvesting solar energy on satellites or lunar bases It will be essential reading for all those interested in energy issues including engineers and physicists electrical mechanical chemical industrial environmental nuclear and industrial leaders and politicians It will also be used as a supplementary textbook on advanced courses on energy
