- Cars altered people's lifestyles:
  - Vacationers could travel greater distances.
  - People could live farther from work, leading to sprawling cities and suburbs.
  - In the suburbs, labor-saving, energy-consuming devices became essential in the home.
  - We expect to see Florida oranges, California lettuces, and Central American bananas in any supermarket in North America.
    - They must be processed, refrigerated, and transported to distant locations.
