Energy Efficiency Policies:

Energy Efficiency Policies Victor Anderson, 1993 This analyses the ways in which energy can be used more economically via the promotion of effective policies Specific case studies highlight the need to end the greenhouse effect by making the transition away from a carbon based economy

Energy Efficiency in Developing Countries Suzana Tavares da Silva, Gabriela Prata Dias, 2020-02-05 This book presents a comparative analysis of energy efficiency policies in developing countries Although there is a vast amount of literature available about renewable energy policy and implementation in the developing world energy efficiency tends to lack attention This book fills this lacuna by examining the current state of the field and scope for future improvements Drawing on a wide range of case studies including Brazil China and Chile the authors use a comparative approach to examine the policies and programmes being implemented looking at the existing legal frameworks and regulatory challenges By showcasing stories of success as well as barriers to energy efficiency they highlight the opportunities for increased energy access and efficiency and demonstrate how these opportunities may directly impact on climate change mitigation This volume will be a useful resource for scholars and practitioners with an interest in energy policy and efficiency climate change and international development

Energy Efficiency Policies Around the World

, 2008 Towards Greater Energy Efficiency in Latin America and the Caribbean Pauline Ravillard, Franco Carvajal, David Daniel Lopez Soto, J. Enrique Chueca, Katherine Antonio, Yi Ji, Michelle Carvalho Metanias Hallack, 2019-12-11 Energy efficiency is the best tool to improve sustainability and affordability of energy services However there are considerable challenges when it comes to identifying opportunities and measurement This monograph provides a comprehensive understanding of the trends and progress made in terms of energy intensity in Latin America and the Caribbean LAC compared to other world regions and nationally by looking at the aggregate industrial and household levels Additionally it discusses the limitations of using such indicator to measure energy efficiency in LAC In order to complement perspectives resulting from this indicator it investigates the counterpart challenge of promoting energy efficiency creating incentives To address this challenge the present document proposes a conceptual framework through which to analyze energy efficiency policies and regulation across the region This framework consists of four steps Law and regulation Types of incentives Targets and Governance and Support The analysis carried out leads to policy recommendations at both the national and regional levels

Energy Efficiency Policy in the United States Elizabeth Doris, 2009 Implementing Energy Efficiency Policies International Energy Agency, 2009 Concerns about energy security climate change and rising energy costs make it imperative for all countries to significantly improve their energy efficiency To assist them in doing so the IEA has proposed 25 energy efficiency recommendations These recommendations could if implemented globally without delay reduce global CO₂ emissions by 8.2 gigatonnes per year by 2030 equivalent to roughly two times the amount of current EU CO₂ emissions Yet are IEA member countries doing enough to capture the full potential benefits from energy efficiency policy This innovative book provides the first assessment of IEA member countries progress on implementing energy efficiency policy Using a rigorous evaluation process it finds that while these countries are implementing a full range of energy efficiency measures their efforts fall short Pressing energy climate and financial challenges require even more energy efficiency policy action particularly in the transport sector To address this action gap IEA member countries must urgently ramp up their energy efficiency policy efforts

Green Savings Marilyn A. Brown, Yu Wang, 2015-09-29 This landmark work lauds the benefits of decreased energy consumption investigating its relationship to public policy and analyzing its potential billion dollar benefits to the U S economy U S consumers tend to use energy indiscriminately something they may no longer be able to do with impunity This game changing book asserts that reducing energy consumption should be a frontline strategy to address global climate change threats to energy security and the challenge of grid reliability The book supports two bold arguments that policies motivating greater investment in high energy efficiency should be a priority and that energy efficiency can help the nation in times of crisis To make their case for the necessity of prioritizing demand reduction the authors examine the policies and markets operating in a number of leading cities states and nations across the globe to uncover the keys to their success These examples show how demand side strategies can significantly reduce pollution cut costs and make the electric grid more resilient The authors explain why these technologies are not widely adopted and assess the potential savings they can produce The book will be an eye opener for policymakers energy professionals and the public as it demonstrates how cost effective demand reduction policies can improve air quality strengthen electricity markets and generate jobs

Energy Efficiency in Housing Management Nico Nieboer, Sasha Tsenkova, Vincent Gruis, Anke van Hal, 2012-07-26 The embedding of energy efficiency in the management of individual housing organisations is crucial for the realization of current ambitious energy efficiency policies This issue is examined for the first time in this book through an analysis of selected case studies in new green buildings as well as in the retrofitting of existing housing maintenance and budgeting The links between policy ambitions practice and housing management institutions are given particular attention Thus the book is primarily concerned with how ambitions about energy efficiency are carried forward in investment decisions at the housing estate level Technical and financial issues relevant for this are also addressed The editors combine a wealth of experience in comparative research on housing policy and housing management with a strong academic background in housing studies and economics The book aims to be internationally comparative including a range of countries A chapter will be devoted to each of the following countries Sweden Denmark Germany the Netherlands England France Switzerland Austria Czech Republic Slovenia Canada The book will appeal to a large audience of students and academics who are concerned with housing issues urban policy and politics as well as to those engaged in research in energy efficiency policies in the built environment

Public Policies, Private Choices Reuben Alexander Deumling,2008 Energy Efficiency Policies and Indicators World Energy Council,2001 Energy Efficiency Policy in the United States ,2009 This report catalogs by sector buildings transportation industrial and power energy efficiency policies at the federal state and local levels and identifies some prominent policy trends Four key findings emerged from this report 1 leadership on energy efficiency is necessary and is found at each level of government 2 there is no widely accepted methodology for evaluating energy efficiency policies 3 coordination among the three levels of government and across sectors is increasingly important and there are opportunities to significantly improve policy performance through a unified strategy and 4 there are efficiencies to be gained by informing policies in one sector with experience from others

Energy Efficiency Policies and Indicators ,1998 Infrasound Collection , Collection contains clipping file Decoupling Policies ,2009 This document discusses the policy of decoupling in utilities and how it can be used to encourage energy efficiency

Energy Efficiency Policies for Local Communities (SSA). King Lumor,2016 With a tight growing national budget in developing countries and the rising demand for electricity policymakers are seeking for private capital as a key source for funding energy efficiency and climate change related infrastructure Developing countries seek to target energy efficiency programs as means of saving significant energy from such programs to distributed to the large number of communities living without access to modern energy for lighting and cooking Designing Institutional framework to achieving these targets are prime recommendations from several preachers These institutional frameworks must target institutional investors such as the Global energy fund GEF insurance companies and other long term investors whose 71 trillion in assets form one of the largest pools of private capital in the world These funds can be used to address developing SSA country s energy needs through energy efficiency and climate change mitigation programs Empirical evidence by several researchers on Climate Policy state that various attractive investment opportunities exist if nations could reduce institutional barriers to attract investors for renewable energy and energy efficiency projects Other investor groups recommended by researchers are the Global Investor Coalition on Climate Change GIC and UNEP Finance Initiative UNEP FI together represent global institutional investors responsible for over 22 trillion in assets Thus the question becomes whether developing countries are prepared to enact and align policies to bridge the financing gap in attracting institutional investments to address their energy shortfalls and climate change challenges
