Operation Rösselprung And The Elimination Of Tito, 25 May 1944: A Failure In Planning And Intelligence Support Lieutenant-Colonel Wayne D. Eyre, 2014-08-15 Operation R SSELPRUNG was a Second World War German operation conducted in Bosnia which aimed at eliminating the leadership of the Partisan movement namely Marshal Josip Broz Tito It was a direct action raid which involved an airborne parachute and glider assault by 500 SS Fallschirmjäger Parachute Battalion on the suspected site of Tito s Headquarters and a subsequent linkup with the German XV Mountain Corps converging from all directions Operation R SSELPRUNG failed due to mediocre intelligence support and inadequate tactical level planning Intelligence shortfalls were rooted primarily in poor German inter organization relations and cooperation including the sharing of intelligence which resulted in missed opportunities and a failure to pinpoint Tito s location with sufficient precision Given the quality of intelligence provided the plan for the airborne assault did not include sufficient flexibility for the execution of contingencies There are three major conclusions from the failure of this operation that can be applied to contemporary operations of a similar nature The first deals with tactics to be employed in the face of uncertain intelligence The degree of intelligence certainty is critical in determining both the size of the force and the extent of the objective area in a direct action raid The second is the requirement for contingency planning Contingency planning provides commanders with flexibility once an operation has commenced to deal with the unexpected and is especially vital in the face of uncertain intelligence The third and probably most critical concerns the importance of

interagency intelligence cooperation It is vital that different intelligence organizations that are pursuing a similar goal especially in the same theatre of operations cooperate to the greatest extent possible Falling From Grace: The German Airborne In World War II Chris Mason,2014-08-15 In the late 1930 s an aggressive and innovative rearmament program in Nazi Germany gave rise to the tactics of vertical envelopment Pioneering the use of gliders as troop carriers parachutists and the air landing of reinforcements to exploit tactical success the German Wehrmacht used the new technique of airborne warfare with startling success as part of the Blitzkrieg campaign against the Low Countries and France in 1940 When the tactical doctrine used to seize bridges strong points and road junctions in Fall Gelb was transferred to the seizure of an entire island that was heavily defended in 1941 however the German airborne effectively committed suicide In ten days in May 1941 half the airborne forces in the entire German army were killed or wounded on Crete Hitler wrongly ascribed the disaster to a playing out of the surprise factor and banned further parachute operations until 1943 The right conclusions were arrived at by the commander of the German airborne himself General Kurt Student in post battle analysis His own insistence on faulty tactics was devastating The German innovation of vertical envelopment in the 1930 s was as revolutionary to modern military tactics as the simultaneous development of the integrated combined arms offensive known today as the Blitzkrieg In putting Billy Mitchell s ideas into practice Luftwaffe General Student demonstrated vision innovative thinking and practical military skill Poor intelligence and reliance on his spreading oil drops tactics for the deployment of his paratroopers the Fallschirmtruppe on Crete however led directly to their removal as a significant weapon from the German arsenal in World War II German Special Forces of World War II Gordon Williamson,2012-06-20 A fascinating and long overdue study of the troops that made up Germany s elite special forces of World War II Such forces included the legendary Skorzeny Commandos who carried out audacious tasks such as the glider borne rescue of Mussolini and the kidnapping of the son of the Hungarian regent Admiral Horthy This book also includes details of lesser known units such as the Brandenburgers who operated behind enemy lines in captured uniforms and the Kleinkampfverb nde who were the forerunners of modern day naval combat troops like the US Navy SEALs Complete with uniform and kit detail together with action accounts of many of these daring operations this book is a must have for any special forces enthusiast
