Families And Schools In A Pluralistic Society:

Families and Schools in a Pluralistic Society Nancy Feyl Chavkin, 1993-02-02 Recent research identifies increased parent involvement in education as a promising method to bolster student achievement Statistics show that while many traditional white middle class families have found ways to be involved with their children s schooling our nation now needs to find ways to include more minority parents in their children s education Most educators and parents would agree that minority parent involvement in education is essential the mechanics of developing sensitive realistic and workable home school relationships are more elusive It requires a concerted effort by all involved to understand more about the complex parent school relationship and to develop specific plans to help families This comprehensive volume features substantial material from the nation s most renowned research projects on parent involvement Stanford University s Center for the Study of Families Children and Youth the Johns Hopkins University s Center for Research on Elementary and Middle Schools the Southwest Educational Development Laboratory and the National Catholic Education Association In addition to a section on research the book includes a section on practice that presents research tested strategies on working with minority parents Asian American Indian Hispanic African American and other minority groups The book concludes with a section on future challenges that educators must confront and appendices on promising national programs and helpful resource materials

Schools Do to Involve Families Paula Jameson Whitney, Neal A. Glasgow, 2016-01-26 From traditional forms of communication such as open houses parent teacher conferences and fundraising efforts to hot button topics such as bullying and discipline this book helps educators bridge the gap between school and home      Changing Urban Education Clarence Nathan Stone, 1998 With critical issues like desegregation and funding facing our schools dissatisfaction with public education has reached a new high Teachers decry inadequate resources while critics claim educators are more concerned with job security than effective teaching Though urban education has reached crisis proportions contending players have difficulty agreeing on a common program of action This book tells why Changing Urban Education confronts the prevailing naivete in school reform by examining the factors that shape reinforce or undermine reform efforts Edited by one of the nation s leading urban scholars it examines forces for change and resistance in urban education and proposes that the barrier to reform can only be overcome by understanding how schools fit into the broader political contexts of their cities Much of the problem with our schools lies with the reluctance of educators to recognize the profoundly political character of public education The contributors show how urban political contexts vary widely with factors like racial composition the role of the teachers union and relations between cities and surrounding metropolitan areas Presenting case studies of original field research in Baltimore Chicago Houston and six other urban areas they consider how resistance to desegregation and the concentration of the poor in central urban areas affect education and they suggest how cities can build support for reform through the involvement of business and other community players By demonstrating the complex interrelationship between urban education and politics this book shows schools to be not just places for educating children but also major employers and large spenders of tax dollars It also introduces the concept of civic capacity the ability of educators and non educators to work together on common goals and suggests that this key issue must be addressed before education can be improved Changing Urban Education makes it clear to educators that the outcome of reform efforts depends heavily on their political context as it reminds political scientists that education is a major part of the urban mix While its prognosis is not entirely optimistic it sets forth important guidelines that cannot be ignored if our schools are to successfully prepare children for the future

Promising Practices for Family Involvement in Schools Diana Hiatt-Michael, 2001-11-01 This volume will address major frameworks for understanding family involvement and government support of family involvement projects in the initial chapters The following six chapters present a theoretical base for understanding school family and community partnerships and research supporting promising practices Included within each chapter are examples of research in action focusing on specific interactive activities or programs designed to bring families and schools together Such promising practices are organized into chapters dealing with two way home school communication family literacy projects school site parent centers parent school collaborative governance and family school education programs spanning infancy through young adulthood The monograph concludes with a chapter on teacher preparation for work with family school and community partnership issues Besides their research expertise each author brings a unique background as classroom teacher parent and community social advocate to their writing Individually most of us have spent our early professional years within the classroom acquiring the value of connecting home with school for the benefit of the children As parents and grandparents we have advocated for parental interests within the school As community advocates we strive for collaborative communication across groups who serve children and their families We invite you to share our passion for working with families and community groups within our schools
