Family And Peer Influences On Adolescent Substance Use:

Family and Peer Influences on Adolescent Substance Use Michael Windle, 1999-12-31 Alcohol and other substance use among adolescents has been increasingly recognized as a potential deterrent to healthy adolescent development because the abusive use of such substances may seriously undermine the successful resolution of major developmental life tasks. The articles in this special issue illuminate the multiple family and peer influences that impact adolescent substance use and abuse. Collectively they emphasize the need for greater integration of developmental theory and application in our attempts to understand the multiple factors and processes that influence the pervasive use and abuse of substances by adolescents. Importantly, the application of a developmental perspective to the study of family and peer processes as contributors to adolescent substance use will facilitate efforts to inform social policy decision making as it relates to substance use preventive and treatment interventions at both the micro and macro levels.

The Family Context of Adolescent Drug Use Robert H. Coombs, 2019-11-12 Here is an essential volume for educators, social workers, health care professionals, and parents who are frustrated by the consuming power of drugs over the lives of young people and looking for answers to this enormous problem. In this unique and highly practical volume, experts concentrate on the family, the foundation of mental health and social control as the most positive force in the prevention of adolescent drug use. Despite the war on drugs, young people in large numbers continue to use substances. This instructive guide focuses on educating and strengthening families, which makes stronger children who are less likely to use drugs instead of the traditional efforts based on rehabilitation instead of prevention. It offers instructive background information about societal forces that affect families and make it difficult to raise drug-free youngsters. Family differences are discussed, such as family structure, parenting styles, ethnic and cultural characteristics. Contributors thoroughly examine practical, effective interventions at home, at school, and with peers that are positive rather than negative, instructional rather than punitive and preventive instead of remedial.

Peer and family influence on adolescent drug addicts Hina Qazi, 2014-10-29 Master's Thesis from the year 2014 in the subject Psychology Miscellaneous grade A course MSc language English abstract The aim of the present study was to find out the family and peer influences on adolescent drug addicts. The sample comprised of 110 adolescent males taken from the different areas of Khyber Pakhtoonkhwa. The instruments used were: i) Index Of Family Relation (IFR) It consisted of a 5 point Likert type scale with 17 items. Seven items were positively coded i.e. 1, 2, 4, 5, 8, 14, 16, 17 and 10 were negatively coded. ii) Index Of Peer Relation (IPR) It comprised of a 5 point Likert scale with 13 items Eleven were positively coded and 2 items 4 5 were negative For the statistical analysis Mean Stander Deviation and t value was calculated that t test were used to analyze the relationship of high and low income group of addicts with their peers and with their family The correlation between family influence and friends influenced on the addicts was checked The results indicated that lower income groups of adolescent drug addicts have poor relationships with their family and strong relationship with their peers Low income group of addicts have more intrafamilial problem then the high income group of addicts The alpha reliability of both scales was also calculated The reliability of IFR is 95 and reliability of IPR is 7
