Family In Brazil:

A Family from Brazil Julia Waterlow,1998 Describes a typical day in the life of a Brazilian family living in S o Paulo

The Family in Bahia, Brazil, 1870-1945 Dain Edward Borges,1992-07 This history of the Brazilian family in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries studies the relationship between the informal institution of the family and such formal social institutions as medicine the law organized politics and the church The author focuses primarily on middle and upper class families for whom adequate documentation is available and shows the change from a patriarchal model of the family to one that was more conjugal and nuclear a change necessitated by an insecure and urbanizing economy Nevertheless Bahian families maintained many traditional values and traditional kin networks The author examines the daily life and dynamics of households including what is known about lower class families where consensual arrangements were the norm He looks at the history of the medical profession the legal profession and the Catholic church and he describes the attempts of each group to mobilize the family for its own political social and cultural ends The author argues that family ideology and families themselves resisted and transformed the efforts of these institutions to impose their will The book also deals with the changes and continuities in Bahian attitudes and beliefs about courtship honor and the place of women as well as the ways in which Bahians projected a familial ethic onto social relations outside the home Within families conduct was governed by a belief in the traditional rituals of life in the family circle weekly family dinners at the table of an older relative residence in family compounds around an old mansion or in several apartments of a single building nepotism in public bureaucracies and the management of both small and large businesses by families and their relatives Although these patterns of family life were transformed over time this study demonstrates that such traditions did survive even thrive well into the twentieth century

Land-use trends and environmental governance policies in Brazil Andrew Miccolis, Renata Marson Teixeira de Andrade, Pablo Pacheco, 2014-12-29 Historically the policy framework in Brazil has played a decisive role in shaping land use and changes in the rural landscape Over the last three decades the country has made impressive gains on socioeconomic environmental and rural development policy fronts Nonetheless an overall analysis of Brazil's policy framework pertaining to land use shows contradictions and constraints that need to be addressed in the long run One such contradiction is given by disparities in rural credit and finance policies with greater amounts favoring large scale farming as opposed to family farming despite the key role of smallholders in food production and job creation and still low resources allocated to programs promoting low carbon agricultural practices Another contradiction is the dichotomy between climate change policies and mainstream agricultural and rural development policies Brazil's overriding challenge is harmonizing and effectively coordinating these different policy agendas at their various levels of implementation so as to effectively manage trade offs The question is what measures can be put in place to enable continued growth of agricultural production while also reducing its negative social and environmental costs The answer lies partly in increasing support for implementing and up scaling initiatives to promote low emissions agriculture and providing other economic incentives for adopting more sustainable use and conservation oriented agricultural and land use practices Ultimately reconciling agricultural production with conservation and rural livelihoods requires greater coordination and harmonization among sectoral policies at various levels of government Achieving this goal requires the adoption of a combination of a value chain based and territorial approach to land use planning with more integrated farming systems in order to enable making improved decisions according to multiple trade offs and impacts
