

Family Interaction

- A unique form of social interaction
 - Based on intimate and continuing relationships
 - Family functions are carried out through interaction
 - Important influence on family interaction is the self-esteem of each member
 - If adult members have adequate self-esteem, they can provide the love and nurturing to develop the self-esteem, belonging, and acceptance needed for the growth and development of the children
 - If they lack self-acceptance and self-respect, it is unlikely that they will be loving spouses or parents
 - In a healthy family, members love and respect one another
