The Changing Rhythms of American Family Life Suzanne M. Bianchi, John P. Robinson, Melissa A.

Milke, 2006-07-13 Over the last forty years the number of American households with a stay at home parent has dwindled as women have increasingly joined the paid workforce and more women raise children alone Many policy makers feared these changes would come at the expense of time mothers spend with their children In Changing Rhythms of American Family Life sociologists Suzanne M Bianchi John P Robinson and Melissa Milkie analyze the way families spend their time and uncover surprising new findings about how Americans are balancing the demands of work and family Using time diary data from surveys of American parents over the last four decades Changing Rhythms of American Family Life finds that despite increased workloads outside of the home mothers today spend at least as much time interacting with their children as mothers did decades ago and perhaps even more Unexpectedly the authors find mothers time at work has not resulted in an overall decline in sleep or leisure time Rather mothers have made time for both work and family by sacrificing time spent doing housework and by increased multitasking Changing Rhythms of American Family Life finds that the total workload in and out of the home for employed parents is high for both sexes with employed mothers averaging five hours more per week than employed fathers and almost nineteen hours more per week than homemaker mothers Comparing average workloads of fathers with all mothers both those in the paid workforce and homemakers the authors find that there is gender equality in total workloads as there has been since 1965 Overall it appears that Americans have adapted to changing circumstances to ensure that they preserve their family time and provide adequately for their children Changing Rhythms of American Family Life explodes many of the popular misconceptions about how Americans balance work and family Though the iconic image of the American mother has changed from a docile homemaker to a frenzied sleepless working mom this important new volume demonstrates that the time mothers spend with their families has remained steady throughout the decades Couples, Kids, and Family Life Jaber F. Family Systems and Life-span Development Kurt Kreppner, Richard M. Lerner, 2013-05-13 This interdisciplinary volume presents international research and theories focusing on the development of the individual across the life span Centering on family as the key context influencing and being influenced by the developing person the contributors to this volume discuss an array of theoretical models methodological strategies and substantive foci linking the study of individual development the family system and the broader context of human development The volume presents continuing empirical research and theories in the realm of individual and family development and features a developmental contextual view from a process oriented vantage point Adolescent Drinking and Family Life Geoff Lowe, David R. Foxcroft, David Sibley, 2022-12-29 Originally published in 1993 Adolescent Drinking and Family Life portrays teenage drinking not as a symptom of pathology but as a perfectly normal developmental phase within the context of the home environment Drinking is predominantly social behaviour and the family is seen as a major agent of socialization The authors have therefore explored family dynamics and the influence which the home environment has upon adolescent drinking to come up with a new theoretical model A major feature of this approach is the interaction of ideas from family life psychology and human geography The authors present a typology of domestic regimes illustrated by case studies of boundary enforcement and transgression The general theme of boundary transgression applied here to both the psychosocial environment and built form represents an interesting new theoretical perspective The integration of these two fields is an innovation which should stimulate further interdisciplinary work in adolescence and addiction research Adolescent Drinking and Family Life will be interesting to researchers and practitioners in adolescence family dynamics and alcohol as well as any social scientist with an interest in the link between behaviour and the home environment This new approach had important implications for health education and for interventions concerned with adolescent alcohol use at the time Today it can be read in its historical context
