Ecology and Aging Centre International de Gérontologie Sociale, 1978 Handbook of the Psychology of Aging James E. Birren, Klaus Warner Schaie, 1985 The Handbook of the Psychology of Aging has become the definitive reference source for information on the psychology of adult development and aging The Fifth Edition provides comprehensive reviews of research on biological and social influences on behavior and age related changes in psychological function In addition to covering environmental influences on behavior and aging and gender differences in aging new chapters in the Fifth Edition discuss wisdom creativity and technological change and the older worker This handbook is an essential reference for researchers in adult development and gerontology and suitable as an advanced textbook for courses on the psychology of aging The Environment for Aging Russell A. Ward, Mark La Gory, Susan R. Sherman, 1988 The nature and consequences of aging depend on its environmental context and the literature does not treat the various environmental dimensions in an integrated fashion The authors introduce a general approach to the human ecosystem highlighting theoretical and empirical issues necessary to an understanding of person environment interaction related to aging They then investigate in detail three aspects of the environment of older persons residential and neighborhood interpersonal support networks and age related attitudes They give specific attention to the impact of the age composition of neighborhoods and interpersonal networks. The authors present findings from their interview survey of 1 185 community residents aged 60 and over. Major findings from the interviews include: Despite objective neighborhood problems, older persons express high neighborhood satisfaction. This partly reflects limited residential options as well as a passive and vicarious spatial experience. The environment is experienced in diverse ways; however, urbanism and personal competence shape the nature and outcomes of person-environment interaction. Older persons have relatively robust interpersonal support networks. Perceived sufficiency of contact and support are more salient to morale than are more objective measures of interpersonal support. Although attitudes toward other older people are generally favorable, patterns of age identity reflect a detrimental view of aging. There is little evidence that socialization for aging or age group solidarity make aging easier in this regard. Older persons exhibit moderate age homogeneity within their interpersonal networks, partly reflecting neighborhood age concentration. Contrary to the apparent benefits of planned age-segregated housing, age homogeneity in neighborhoods and networks does not contribute to well-being. The authors examine three major themes in their concluding chapter: age itself does not loom large in the lives of these community residents, though age becomes salient under certain conditions; there is diversity in the implications of the environmental context for aging, in particular reflecting an environmental docility hypothesis; and aging must be viewed in interactional or transactional terms. Older people construct the environment as a subjective entity.

Annual Review of Gerontology and Geriatrics, Volume 23, 2003 Hans-Werner Wahl, PhD, Rick Scheidt, PhD, Paul Windley, PhD, 2003-11-12. In this volume dedicated to M. Powell Lawton, the editors emphasize the need to create new bridges to connect research studies focusing on objective physical environments and other studies mainly addressing subjective person-environment components. Thus, the major goal of this volume is to provide and stimulate multi-directional bridge building from the perspectives of multidisciplinary contributors. Comprehensively addressed subjects include: Aging in Context Across the Adult Life; The General Ecological Model Revisited; The Fit Between Older People and Their Environments; Domestic Arrangements; The Impact of Population Migration; Interior Environments; Residential Satisfaction; Technology-Based Products.

Environment and Aging Theory Rick J. Scheidt, Paul G. Windley, 1998-04-16. Noted scholars of environment-aging relations and environmental psychology examine the value of selected classic, contemporary, and in one instance completely new theories for enhancing both research and service provision on housing for elderly populations. The contributors examine the housing needs of older populations and provide theory-driven innovative solutions for improving the fit between older persons and their residential environments. Some issues covered are the need for greater understanding of the psychological needs of older individuals seeking environmental support for a holistic understanding of elder-environment relations in physical, social, and phenomenological contexts; for inclusion of ignored perspectives; and for recognition of the continuing value of major founding theories. This book will be of interest to students, scholars, and professionals in psychology, gerontology,

Eco-Innovation and Sustainable Development in Industry 5.0 Atiku, Sulaiman Olusegun,Jeremiah, Andrew,Semente, Efigenia,Boateng, Frank,2024-06-05 In the era of Industry 5.0 the world faces a critical juncture where technological advancement collides with escalating socio environmental challenges Climate change energy consumption and threats to public health are exacerbated by the rapid embrace of Industry 4.0 technologies. As businesses pursue efficiency, the compromise on human and social sustainability becomes inevitable. The need for a holistic approach to sustainable development is urgent where economic growth aligns seamlessly with environmental, social, and human well-being. Eco-Innovation and Sustainable Development in Industry 5.0 serves as a guide in the pursuit of sustainable development within Industry 5.0. This book dissects the intricate challenges posed by socio-environmental issues and seamlessly offers a multidisciplinary approach to achieving sustainable development goals. The detrimental impact of Industry 4.0 on sustainable development necessitates the paradigm shift proposed within the book. Economic pursuits can no longer overshadow the crucial pillars of human, social, and environmental sustainability. The delicate balance required for a sustainable future is at risk, demanding a multidisciplinary approach to reconcile these seemingly conflicting objectives. This book is a call to action to bridge the knowledge gap and provide tangible solutions for achieving sustainability in Industry 5.0.

Environmental Gerontology Rick Scheidt, Benjamin Schwarz, 2013-09-13. Environmental gerontology, the research on aging and environment, evolved during the late 1960s when the domain became a relevant topic due to societal concerns with the problems of housing for elderly people. The field proliferated during the 1970s and 1980s and remains viable and active today on an international scale. However, in recent times, the viability of the field and its future has been brought into question. In this volume, international experts across diverse areas reflect on the current progress of their respective disciplines, illustrating research-grounded benefits emerging from their work and suggesting new agenda that can guide progress in the future. The contributors address a wide range of issues, including evaluation of existing paradigms and new theories that might advance both research and training issues and applications in methods, measures, and empirically generated research agenda, innovative approaches to environmental transformations in home, community, and long-term care settings, and understudied populations and issues in environmental gerontology. This book was originally published as a special issue of the Journal of Housing for the Elderly.
