 Puerto Rico, the largest island in the Caribbean, is 34 miles long and 35 miles wide. It is located in the northern part of the Caribbean Sea, between the Atlantic Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico. The island is surrounded by the Puerto Rico Trench to the north, the Mona Passage to the south, and the Virgin Islands to the east. The island is divided into four main regions: the northern region, the central region, the southern region, and the western region. The northern region is the most mountainous, with the highest peaks in the Cordillera Central. The central region is the most fertile, with the most productive agricultural land. The southern region is the most developed, with the most urban areas. The western region is the least developed, with the fewest urban areas. The island is home to a wide variety of plant and animal life, including many species that are found nowhere else in the world. The island's climate is tropical, with hot temperatures and high humidity. The island's population is approximately 3.5 million people, with Spanish and English as the official languages. The island's economy is primarily based on tourism, agriculture, and manufacturing.
