Profile of Family Caregivers of Elderly at Home ,2014 Abstract Objective To investigate the sociodemographic profile of family caregivers of elderly at home and the level of overload resulted by care activity Method A descriptive cross sectional study conducted with 29 family caregivers of elderly individuals enrolled in a Family Health Strategy There were collected data on functional independence demographic data and level of caregiver overload A study approved by the Research Ethics Committee under Opinion No 128 580 2012 Results It was found that 79% of the elderly had functional dependence The profile of caregivers showed that the majority are women married with advanced age level of education and low income It was also found that the time devoted to the care is long justifying the overload observed mainly in caregivers of dependent elderly Conclusion The results point out the need for more social support and health care to family caregivers which could contribute to reducing the overload related to caring Supports for Family Caregivers of the Elderly, 1985 Family Care of Dependent Older People in the European Community

Medicine Christine K. Cassel, Rosanne Leipzig, Harvey Jay Cohen, Eric B. Larson, Diane E. Meier, 2006-05-29 Since the publication of the third edition of Geriatric Medicine extraordinary advances have occurred in the science of aging and the potential for biomedical research to give us answers to many if not most of the age related disorders that threaten the quality of life in older years At the most basic level the successful mapping of the human genome was declared complete in the fall of 2000 Understanding the map of the human genome is as important as understanding the map of genomes of important laboratory species ranging from the microscopic worms and fruit flies used in most classic genetic studies to rodents such as laboratory mice and eventually to primates on which much of the research on the aging human brain is done The genetic maps of all of these species including our own does not answer clinical questions but it does open the door to dramatic rapid and efficient answers to questions about the genetic polymorphisms related to diseases in humans The telomerase story also unfolded since the third edition Telomerase is an enzyme responsible for maintaining the telomeres the redundant DNA portions at the end of chromosomes whose shortening seems to be linked directly to cell senescence apoptosis and the control over cell death which at the level of the individual cell seems to be linked to the decline of organ function and eventually aging and death within the organism
