Child Welfare Professionals and Incest Families Ingrid Thompson-Cooper, 2017-07-12 This title was first published in 2001 Little research has been done on the nature of decision making by child welfare professionals in child abuse cases or on the impact of the different approaches on victims and their families This text compares a system which relies heavily on criminal prosecution to handle child abuse cases England with a system that is more treatment orientated and depends primarily on child welfare and clinical services Canada The study examines the extent and nature of the incestuous abuse how it was disclosed and the initial reponse from the professionals It then looks at how the cases are processed through child welfare and criminal justice systems with attention paid to the decisions made throughout The nature of the social service contacts with the family are also examined as are the type and length of treatment It attempts to determine what factors influence the legal and clinical decisions that are made by various professionals throughout the whole process

Confronting Chronic Neglect Institute of Medicine, Board on Children, Youth, and Families, Committee on the Training Needs of Health Professionals to Respond to Family Violence, 2002-05-04 As many as 20 to 25 percent of American adults or one in every four people have been victimized by witnesses of or perpetrators of family violence in their lifetimes Family violence affects more people than cancer yet it is an issue that receives far less attention Surprisingly many assume that health professionals are deliberately turning a blind eye to this traumatic social problem The fact is very little is being done to educate health professionals about family violence Health professionals are often the first to encounter victims of abuse and neglect and therefore they play a critical role in ensuring that victims as well as perpetrators get the help they need Yet despite their critical role studies continue to describe a lack of education for health professionals about how to identify and treat family violence And those that have been trained often say that despite their education they feel ill equipped or lack support from by their employers to deal with a family violence victim sometimes resulting in a failure to screen for abuse during a clinical encounter Equally problematic the few curricula in existence often lack systematic and rigorous evaluation This makes it difficult to say whether or not the existing curricula even works Confronting Chronic Neglect offers recommendations such as creating education and research centers that would help raise awareness of the problem on all levels In addition it recommends ways to involve health care professionals in taking some responsibility for responding to this difficult and devastating issue Perhaps even more importantly Confronting Chronic Neglect encourages society as a whole to share responsibility Health professionals alone cannot solve this complex problem Responding to victims of family violence and ultimately preventing its occurrence is a societal responsibility Research in Education, 1970 Social Justice and Social Work Michael J. Austin, 2013-03-26 This unique and timely book edited by Michael J Austin introduces and connects social justice to the core values of social work across the curriculum It presents the history and philosophy that supports social justice and ties it to ethical concepts that will help readers understand social justice as a core social work value The book further conveys the importance of amplifying client voice explores organization based advocacy and describes how an understanding of social justice can inform practice and outlines implications for education and practice
