Condiciones financieras de las empresas españolas JOAQUÍN MAUDOS VILLARROYA, JUAN FERNÁNDEZ DE GUEVARA, 2019-11-22 La experiencia de la pasada crisis ha puesto de manifiesto una vez más el importante papel que juegan las condiciones en el acceso a la financiación En este contexto la presente monografía analiza la importancia que las condiciones financieras tienen a la hora de explicar las diferencias en las tasas de inversión y productividad de las empresas aportando evidencia para el modelo español En el primer caso se trata de una variable crucial para explicar el ciclo económico y por tanto la evolución del PIB y el empleo en el segundo la productividad es ampliamente conocida la importancia que tiene como fuente de crecimiento económico a largo plazo El principal valor añadido de esta obra es analizar microeconómicamente los determinantes de la inversión y la productividad de las empresas españolas poniendo el foco en el endeudamiento y el grado de restricción en el acceso a la financiación La investigación realizada muestra que un elevado nivel de endeudamiento es una barrera para la recuperación de la inversión y que su efecto no es lineal sino que a partir de un determinado umbral el impacto negativo es mayor Este efecto negativo del endeudamiento es adicional al que tiene el grado de restricción financiera por lo que las dos variables captan cosas distintas La segunda parte de la monografía se dedica al análisis de la productividad y su relación con las variables financieras Los resultados indican que a mayor intensidad de la restricción financiera la productividad es menor No obstante el endeudamiento es la variable financiera con una mayor relación con la productividad Mayor endeudamiento permite mejorar la productividad porque permite reasignar los recursos de formas más eficientes aumentar la inversión etc Sin embargo a partir de un determinado umbral la relación se torna negativa esto es más endeudamiento está asociado a menor productividad Los resultados obtenidos son de interés desde el punto de vista de la formulación de medidas de política económica En concreto dadas las secuelas que un elevado endeudamiento tiene para la recuperación posterior de la inversión así como por sus efectos a largo plazo sobre la productividad es importante establecer mecanismos de alerta temprana que adviertan de que la deuda empresarial está alcanzando niveles preocupantes así como reducir el grado de dependencia de las empresas de la financiación bancaria La monografía va dirigida tanto a un público académico como al más especializado entre los que se incluyen analistas y estudiantes de grado y posgrado en materias relacionadas con la economía
