Flood Defence Law:

Flood Defence Law William Howarth, 2002-01-01 This new book provides a new approach to a subject which has become of prominent and widespread public concern recently The combination of unprecedented rainfall and environmental fears about long term climatic change have placed the legal provisions and administrative responsibilities concerning floods and land drainage under new scrutiny The purpose of this book is to examine these issues in a topical context and provide an account of the law which will be of value to those with relevant responsibilities and which is accessible to property owners for whom the operation of the law raises a series of vitally important practical issues Floods, from Defence to

Advances in Urban Flood Management Richard Ashley, Stephen Garvin, Erik Pasche, Andreas Vassilopoulos, Chris Zevenbergen, 2007-02-01 One of the effects of global climate change is the increasing variability of extreme flood events and cyclones Current measures to mitigate flood impacts particularly in the urban environment are based on previously planned flood risk intervals and no longer provide sufficient protection Being prepared for unexpected changes and extreme flood events asks for a paradigm shift in current strategies to avoid and manage flood disasters In order to stem the increasing impact of urban floods a major rethink of current planning and flood management policies and practice is required taking into account different spatial and temporal scales This book addresses a broad spectrum of relevant issues in the emerging field of urban flood management It may act as a stimulus for further research and development in urban flood management while informing and engaging stakeholders in the promotion of integrated and cooperative approaches in water management An interdisciplinary approach which will be of interest to all those who are active in water risk and urban management

Flood Resilience of Private Properties Thomas Hartmann, Willemijn van Doorn-Hoekveld, Helena F.M.W. van Rijswijk, Tejo Spit, 2020-12-17 Flood Resilience of Private Properties examines the division and balance of responsibilities between the public and the private when discussing flood resilience of private properties. Flooding is an expensive, climate related disaster and a threat to urban life. Continuing development in flood prone zones compounds the risks. Protecting all properties to the same standards is ever more challenging. Research has focused on improved planning and adapting publicly owned infrastructure such as streets, evacuation routes, and retention ponds. However, damages often happen on private land. To realize a flood resilient city, owners of privately owned residential houses also need to act. Measures such as mobile barriers and backwater valves or avoiding vulnerable uses in basements can make homes more flood resilient. But private owners may be unaware of flooding risks or may lack the means and knowledge to act. Incentives may be insufficient while fragmented or unclear property rights and responsibilities entrench inertia. The challenge is motivating homeowners to take steps. Political and societal systems influence the action citizens are prepared to take and what they expect their governments to do. The responsibility for implementing such measures is shared between the public and the private domain in different degrees in different countries This book will be of great interest to scholars of water law property rights flood risk management and climate adaptation This book was originally published as a special issue of Water International
