Odoni, Lucio Bianco, Giorgio Szegö, 2012-12-06 This volume is a compendium of papers presented during the NATO Workshop which took place in Capri Italy October 12 18 1986 on the general subject of Flow Control of Congested Networks The Case of Data Processing and Transportation and of which we acted as co chairmen The focus of the workshop was on flow control methodologies as applied to preventing or reducing congestion on 1 data communication networks 2 urban transportation networks and 3 air traffic control systems The goals of the workshop included review of the state of the art of flow control methodologies in general and in each of the three application areas identification of similarities and differences in the objective functions modeling approaches and mathematics used in the three areas examination of opportunities for technology transfers and for future interactions among researchers in the three areas These goals were pursued through individual presentations of papers on current research by workshop participants and in the cases of the second and third goals through a number of open ended discussion and review sessions which were interspersed throughout the workshop s programmeD The full texts or extended summaries of all but a few of the papers given at the workshop are included in this volume Information Flow Control in Computer Networks , 1980 Optimal Routing and Flow Control in Computer Networks Jen-Chan Chien, 1987 Flow Control in Store-and-forward Computer Networks Chong-Wei Tseng, 1981 Document studies the broad area of flow control and sequencing in computer communication networks A special use of message sequencing is shown to reduce to a Markov process A more general sequencing model is also studied only approximate results are obtained in this case The author formally shows that an end to end flow control scheme in computer communication networks can be modeled as a closed network of queues He also introduces and analyzes a flow control scheme based on limiting the permit generation rates It turns out that this scheme is very effective More importantly this scheme involves essentially no computational complexity

This allows us to measure and adjust the network performance with little difficulty. The simplicity also allows us to incorporate more realistic aspects of network protocols such as piggy back acknowledgement, time out and gate functions into our analysis. Two simple but effective distributed dynamic flow control schemes are proposed and analyzed. It is shown that with either of these two schemes a network can respond well to the dynamically changing environment.

Congestion Control in Data Transmission Networks Przemysław Ignaciuk, Andrzej Bartoszewicz, 2012-08-01. Congestion Control in Data Transmission Networks details the modeling and control of data traffic in communication networks. It shows how various networking phenomena can be represented in a consistent mathematical framework suitable for rigorous formal analysis. The monograph differentiates between fluid flow, continuous time traffic models, discrete time processes with constant sampling rates and sampled data systems with variable discretization periods. The authors address a number of difficult real life problems such as optimal control of flows with disparate time varying delay, the existence of source and channel nonlinearities, the balancing of quality of service and fairness requirements and the incorporation of variable rate allocation policies. Appropriate control mechanisms which can handle congestion and guarantee high throughput in various traffic scenarios with different networking phenomena being considered are proposed. Systematic design procedures using sound control theoretic foundations are adopted. Since robustness issues are of major concern in providing efficient data flow regulation in today's networks, sliding mode control is selected as the principal technique to be applied in creating the control solutions. The controller derivation is given extensive analytical treatment and is supported with numerous realistic simulations. A comparison with existing solutions is also provided. The concepts applied are discussed in a number of illustrative examples and supported by many figures, tables and graphs, walking the reader through the ideas and introducing their relevance in real networks. Academic researchers and graduate students working in computer networks and telecommunications and in control, especially time delay systems and discrete time optimal and sliding mode control, will find this text a valuable assistance in ensuring smooth data flow within communications networks.
