Waldeaux Rebecca Davis,2013-06-18 A classic novel of American realism by Rebecca Harding Davis author of Life in the Iron Mills

Frances Waldeaux Rebecca Harding Davis,2014-03-05 In another minute the Kaiser Wilhelm would push off from her pier in Hoboken The last bell had rung the last uniformed officer and white jacketed steward had scurried up the gangway The pier was massed with people who had come to bid their friends good by They were all Germans and there had been unlimited embracing and kissing and sobs of Ach mein lieber Sckatz and Gott bewahre Dick Now they stood looking up to the crowded decks shouting out last fond words A band playing The Merry Maiden and the Tar marched on board The passengers pressed against the rails looking down Almost every one held flowers which had been brought to them not costly bouquets but homely bunches of marigolds or pinks They carried too little German or American flags which they waved frantically romanticism and realism Capturing the fluctuating cultural environment of the Civil War and Reconstruction eras the stories explore such issues as racial prejudice and slavery the loneliness and powerlessness of women and the effects of postwar market capitalism on the working classes Davis s characters include soldiers and civilians men and women young and old blacks and whites Instead of focusing like many writers of the period on major conflicts and leaders Davis takes readers into the intimate battles fought on family farms and backwoods roads delving into the minds of those who experienced the destruction on both sides of the conflict Davis spent the war years in the Pennsylvania and Virginia borderlands a region she called a vast armed camp Here divided families ravaged communities and shifting loyalties were the norm As the editors say Davis does not limit herself to writing about slavery abolition or reconstruction Instead she shows us that through the fighting the rebuilding and the politics life goes on Even during a war people must live they work eat sleep and love
